New Ag Science Construction Complete In Area Schools

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROBESONIA (Berks Co.) and ELVERSON (Chester Co.) — Ag students in two area schools have reason to rejoice.

New course opportunities and brand new facilities provide good news for Conrad Weiser, Robesonia, and Twin Valley High School, Elverson.

At Conrad Weiser, for the 200-2001 school year, 144 students signed up for agriculture science classes (an increase from 107 the year before), according to Steve Miller, chair of the ag sciences department.

The new facilities at Conrad Weiser High School, located next to the old school, include a new greenhouse, small animal facilities, and new laboratories and work areas. The renovations were completed in early 2000.

Included is a 40- by 60-foot greenhouse (twice the size of the old one); a library (measuring 20 by 30 feet with full Internet access); lab areas, including science, veterinary, microbiology, and a filtered plant growth room; soil preparation room; and an animal laboratory.

The animal lab will be especially emphasized, noted Miller. "We want to ensure our students are not divorced from the reality of turning animals into food," he said.

The Conrad Weiser FFA boasts 115 members, said Miller. The members are screened carefully. Miller emphasizes communications and public speaking for the club, which may account for the organization's history of success at the Envirothon.

In addition, Conrad Weiser has a new teaching laboratory assistant (TLA) position available for seniors who work at the university level, Miller noted.

"The whole idea is to mimic college programs with graduate assistants," said Miller. "They apply for the positions and are screened by experienced students. I can't believe how well

Meiser Family Has Learned How To Take Timber To The Bank

MICHELLE RANCK

MCALISTERVILLE (Juniata Co.) — Producers are realizing that their old woodlot may be not only a simple forested corner of the farm but an additional source of income.

The Meiser family of McAllisterville, with their combination of experience in the timber industry and new ideas, have taken on the challenge of connecting producers and lumber companies.

The business began in November 1999 with an offhand conversation. Nathan, a marketing major at Penn State, had stayed after class to talk with a professor who suggested he jump on the Internet bandwagon.

"I didn't think I had the technical skills," said Nathan, but the idea took root. Nathan eventually worked out a way to utilize the Internet by connecting buyers and sellers of timber. He pitched the idea in his father to see if Terry thought the business would work.

Kickin' Up Some Sawdust At KILE

Daily National Grain Market Summary
St. Joseph, MO
October 11, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat bids continued higher midweek, strengthened by continued dry weather in southern Plains and export disappointments. Corn bids also gained ground on trade expectations ahead of USDA reports and overnight export sale to Taiwan. Sharp declines were noted in soybean pits due to rapid harvest. Wheat 1 to 2 cents higher. Corn steady to 5 cents higher. Sorghum 2 cents higher. Soybeans 5 to 11 cents lower.

Export sales remain slow this week for wheat and reports that the US lost part of the Algerian wheat tender, boosted bids. Dry weather con- tinues in the southern Plains, despite forecasts for possible moisture this week. Emergence is behind most places due to the late plantings and Oklahoma shows only 31 percent of the crop planted while Kansas is at 49 percent complete.

Corn bids were mostly higher in anticipation for tomorrow's USDA ending stocks report. Most traders expect a cut in stock estimates.

However, active harvest pressure with 50 percent of the crop in bins, limited gains. Taiwan's corn purchase overnight offered strength to bids.

Higher soybean bids yesterday were erased today with lowest declines since August reported. Rapid harvest progress created some profit taking as 58 percent of the crop is out of fields. Lack of fresh export news also weighed on bids.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying interest was mostly light to fair and generally noted as typical for midweek activity. Supplies of bone-in breasts were spotty in availability and were usually trading at premium levels where additional product was sought beyond normal committments. Boneless-skinless breasts were fully adequate. Wings were generally well cleared and the balance of product was at least adequate. Movement into retail and distributive channels ranged fair to fairly good, with particular draw noted on bone-in breasts. The market tone continued fully steady to instances firm on bone-in breasts, about steady on the balance.

ST. LUKE'S LITTLE SUMMER, OCTOBER 18.

NEW HEIGHTS FOR WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE

Annie Smith Peck, born on October 19 a century and a half ago (1850), first made a name for herself when she climbed the Matterhorn in the Swiss Alps in 1895. In 1908, she was the first mountain climber, man or woman, to ascend the 21,812-foot Mount Huascaran in Peru. At age 61, she again ventured to Peru to climb the 21,250-foot Mount Coropuna, where she placed a "Votes for Women" banner at the peak. That year also saw the publication of her book, Search for the Apex of the World: High Mountain Climbing in Peru and Bolivia, Including the Conquest of Mount Huascaran.

All serious daring starts from within.

OPINION

Be Careful, Or There'll Be Consequences

Insect resistance management.

Corn growers are becoming ever more acquainted with this terminology. They ought to be. Because if they don't observe the proper kind of program, the high-technology corn that keeps bugs low and crop yields high could become a grower's nightmare.

In the section of Corn Talk, published in this week's issue of Lancaster Farming, Penn State entomologist ("insect expert") Dennis Calvin provides some strategies to deal with new varieties of transgenic corn. The new corn has "stackable" genes — meaning ways to deal with corn rootworm and European corn borer are built into the plant.

For Pennsylvania growers, that amounts to 20 percent of corn acres should be "non-Bt" corn to act as a refuge to deter resistance.

However, corn varieties with a combination of corn borer and rootworm traits could make managing them complex, because of the insects' different life cycles. Researchers — and the marketplace itself — are going to have to work on ways together to come up with the best management strategies. It's going to be touch-and-go until those strategies are worked out.

The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has set up an information site on the Web. Just go to their Website, www.ncga.com, and click on the left-hand icon under Insect Resistance Management.

We urge all corn growers to be careful in using those varieties. What with environmental concerns being the front-burning issue of today, only by acting wisely and responsibly can we continue to make biotechnology even more valuable.

Biotech has brought us some great herbicide-tolerant corn crops, too. According to Bob Hartzler of Iowa State University, Australia faces some of the worst herbicide resistance problems in the world. As a result, they've launched a major research and extension program called the Western Australian Herbicide Resistance Initiative to address this issue.

Why has this happened? Because of the mindset of growers, he noted, that herbicide resistance is something that can be dealt with after the fact rather than something to manage prior to emerging as a problem.

If you read a paper published by the Initiative, according to them, growers "down under" believe in herbicide exploitation until resistance develops. They're not thinking about tomorrow, they just want the weed-free crops today.

We have to think differently in this state and this country.

Science could bring us corn that could prosper in drought, ward off all insect pressure, and that you could spray once for weeds and forget it. All the while producing yields, perhaps, into the hundreds of bushels per acre.

But that could all be lost unless these critical first few years of biotech are treated with respect and proper management is employed.

Editor:

Your opinion column ("Accountability Is Key") in the Oct. 7 issue was called to my attention by some local pork producers.

Accountability to producers for the use of checkoff funds is something on which there is whole-hearted agreement. However, what is accountability in the mind of the producer and what cost/benefit will be acceptable?

As an example, the following is a list of a few accountability items that are in place in the pork industry:

- A board of directors is of which the members are elected by their peers
- A producer board that makes decisions on the projects

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Look At Frosted Corn

Corn may be damaged by cold weather anytime the temperatures remain below 32 degrees for 4 to 5 hours or anytime the temperature drops to 28 degrees for only a few minutes, reported Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

The amount of yield loss is directly related to the stage of maturity when the frost hits.

The following are the expected yield losses based on corn maturity when the killing frost hits:

- Black layer formation: 0 percent yield loss
- Hard dent: 5 percent yield loss
- Dent: 9 percent yield loss
- Soft dough: 15 percent yield loss
- Late milk: 36 percent yield loss
- Silking: 100 percent yield loss.

As with grain yields of frosted corn, silage yield will also be reduced, depending on the stage of maturity of the corn plant when the killing frost occurs.

The earlier the frost kills the plant, the lower the grain yield will be. In addition to low yields, frosted corn that is not mature will have low grain test weight and will dry very slowly in the field.

To Consider Ensiling Frosted Corn

A frosted corn crop may be salvaged for silage on many farms, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

When frosted corn is put in the silo, the first concern is that corn that has been killed by frost will appear dryer than corn with similar maturity that has not been frosted.

Several sunny days after a killing frost will cause corn leaves to brown, giving the appearance of mature corn. However, the stalk and ear will still contain a high percentage of moisture. Special care is needed to make sure that the whole plant moisture content is in the proper range for silage in the type of structure it will be stored in.

For conventional upright silos the optimum moisture content for corn silage is between 63 and 68 percent moisture. For a shallow trench, the moisture content increases to between 68 and 72 percent moisture and for sealed structure the moisture content decreases to between 45 and 55 percent.

A second problem could occur when the moisture content of the corn is too low. If corn is too dry for proper ensiling, consider adding water to it at the silo. Depending on how dry the silage is, it takes between 50 and 75 pounds of water per ton of silage to increase the moisture content one percent. A gallon of water weighs about 8.3 pounds, therefore it takes between 6 and 9 gallons of water for each one percentage increase in moisture content.

DAVID'S LAMENT

Background Scripture:
1 Samuel 31:1 through 2 Samuel 1:27; 1 Chronicles 10.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 77:1-9.

You might think it strange that it is David who leads Israel in lamenting the death of Saul, Jonathan, and their soldiers on Mount Gilboa.

Although David and Saul had once been close, Saul's bitter jealousy of David had forced him to flee and hide for several years. Had Saul captured David it is likely he would have had him executed.

Still, Saul's animosity did not seem to evoke the same response from David, who refused to take Saul's life even when he had several opportunities (1 Sam. 24,26). Perhaps David's memories of their past friendship restrained. Maybe it was because of his strong friendship with Jonathan, Saul's son. Another reason is suggested in 2 Samuel 1:14,16, when, questioning the Amelekite sojourner, David calls Saul "the Lord's anointed."

Despite everything, the Lord's choice of Saul as king was more important to David than the danger that Saul represented to him.

Relationships between people are often strained and ruined because of the malign or careless acts of one or more of the persons. Yet, often we ought not to write off these people. We need to remember the good times as well as the bad and try to rebuild the relationship on that basis.

Sometimes, when people come to me for marital counseling, I find that they are focused only on the bad times in their marriage, not the good ones. I often ask them to tell me about an experience when they felt good and positive about their mate. These recollections often trigger warm feelings that have been long forgotten.

Some Good Things

Saul's death was tragic for several reasons. Despite all his failings, Saul had done some good things for Israel: "Ye daughters of Israel," says David, "weep over Saul, who clothed you daintily in scarlet, who put ornaments of gold upon your apparel" (2 Sam 1:24).

For all his weaknesses, Saul had been a mighty military leader: "How are the mighty fallen!" (19,25).

And, most important of all, Saul was the Lord's anointed. It was doubly sad because, despite the Lord's anointing, Saul had seldom risen to the occasion. His nagging self doubt was stronger than his trust in God, so that when he faced difficulties, he saw them not as challenges to be met but dangers from which he hid. So Saul never became the man he was created to become. Do we?

David also expressed freely his own personal sorrow: "I am distressed for you, my bother, Jonathan" (1:26). Despite Saul's bitterness against David, his son and David remained the best of friends. Jonathan's loss was tragic because, unlike his father who brought his ruin upon himself, Jonathan died because of his intense loyalty to his father and family. Jonathan was loyal both to his father and family and David, his friend — a standard all too uncommon today.

In the American Revolution, Tom Paine wrote of the "sunshine patriots." What about "sunshine friendships"?

How Are The Mighty Fallen

2 Samuel 1:18 indicates that David's poem of lamentation was preserved in the Book of Jashar, an anthology of the early poems of Israel. Although we no longer have it today, in addition to this poem of David there are in the Old Testament — (Josh. 10:13 and 1 Kings 8:13) — two additional extracts from that book. That David's poem was inclusion in the Book of Jashar is strong evidence that it is original with David, for in it there is a marked absence of religious feeling. If editors had thought it was not original with David, they probably would have not included it in 2 Samuel.

David is a strong man, but this strong man is able to do what many people cannot: he publicly expresses his grief— for Saul, for Jonathan, and for the nation. "David lamented with his lamentation over Saul and Jonathan his son . . ." (1:17).

Apparently David's countrymen did not think it unmanly or weak of him to grieve publicly for Saul and Jonathan. So why does that point of view not prevail today? Why do we want to hide and play down our grief?

David says that his lamentation "should be taught to the people." Expressions of grief can be a learning experience for us, a chance for all of us to grow as David and the people of Israel did when they unashamedly grieved over their tragic loss.

The Millcreek Row Mulcher lets you apply mulch 3 times faster.

YOUR CHOICE
Millcreek Row Mulchers also let you drop spread in the center of rows.

From tree fruit to vegetable beds, from bramble crops to vineyards, organic mulch and compost can reduce chemical input for weed suppression, retain soil moisture, and improve soil fertility by adding organic matter to sandy and clay soils.

Now Millcreek eliminates the costly labor needed for organic mulch and compost application. The remarkable new Millcreek Row Mulcher works with all types of organic material, and even lets you adjust the depth and width of the mulch rows from 12" to 120" wide, from 1/2" to 6" deep.

Starting under $6500, no other machine compares when it comes to capabilities, versatility, and cost effectiveness. Rugged construction. Six sizes, from 3.4 to 20 cubic yard capacity. Custom designs. Call today for a free color brochure, or to discuss your specific needs.

Glickman Expands USDA Assistance For Farm Storage

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently announced an expansion of USDA's efforts to help farmers meet their tremendous grain storage needs during this period of continued high production.

Glickman said the Department's Farm Storage Facility Loan program, which offers low-interest loans to farmers building on-farm storage facilities, will be expanded to include structures designed to store silage. In addition, the required down payment for loans will be reduced from 25 percent to 15 percent.

"On-farm storage gives farmers marketing flexibility," said Glickman. "USDA is broadening this program to help provide farmers the resources they need to segregate crops and decide when to sell them."

Glickman said enrollment in the four-month old program is growing substantially. As of October 3, 2000, USDA has received 2,347 applications from farmers in 38 states. Exactly 1,828 loans totaling $54 million in 30 states have been approved, including 438 in Iowa, 563 in Minnesota, 172 in South Dakota, and 123 in Illinois. USDA's Farm Service Agency estimates that these facilities will increase on-farm storage capacity by 36 million bushels.

Seven-year financing is provided through the program for on-farm storage of wheat, rice, soybeans, sunflowerseed, canola, rapeseed, safflower, flaxseed, mustardseed, crambe, other oilseeds and corn, grain sorghum, oats, or barley harvested as whole grain.

Loans are also available to farmers who previously bought or built grain storage facilities between February 2, 2000, and May 30, 2000. Farmers may apply for loans and may be approved if they meet eligibility and loan security requirements.

The changes announced today by Glickman will take effect after publication of a final rule in the Federal Register.

Farmers are encouraged to contact their local USDA Service Center or FSA county office for further details. Additional information can also be found on the web at www.fsa.usda.gov.

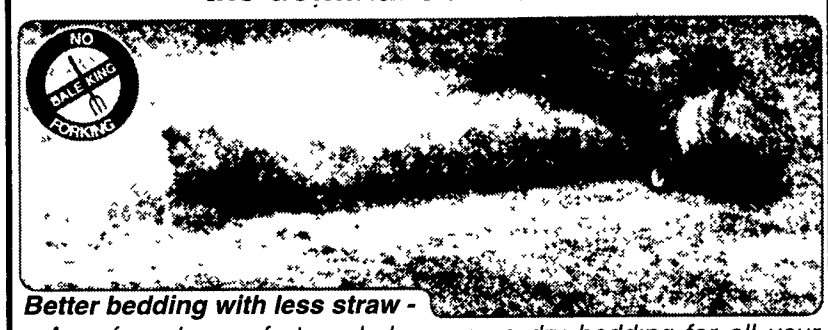
BALE KING

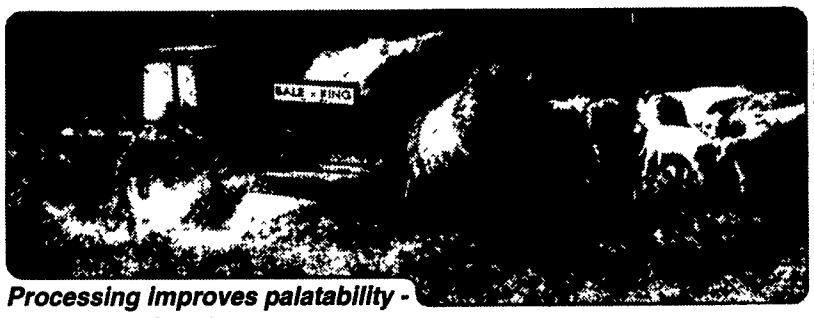
Give your entire herd all the advantages the dominant cows take!



Better bedding with less straw -

A uniform layer of straw helps ensure dry bedding for all your livestock, not just the boss cows. Your entire herd will be cleaner and more comfortable.

Bale King can also be used to spread straw inside poultry barns or blow straw into open front cattle shelters and calving huts as well as produce bedding for hogs. Fast, uniform spreading in a fraction of the time without a pitch fork or strings.



Processing improves palatability -

Reduces feed costs

Processing the bales makes it a lot easier for your livestock to feed. They will no longer have to pull and tear at a packed bale to get a bit of feed. They'll be able to feed faster and use less energy in feeding. Processed feed may improve feed conversion rates. There's also less waste. Many Bale King owners report feed savings of 20% or more.

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — At the recent Manheim Community Farm Show, exhibitors had the chance to participate in the second year of the dairy beef competition, the 4-H and FFA beef show, and a showmanship clinic hosted by judge Ken Brubaker.

In his inaugural year in the dairy beef ring, Jevin Kready, 12, Manheim, showed the grand champion winner. Not only is this his first year with dairy beef, "Buddy" is Jevin's first livestock project.

Jevin, in the sixth grade at Manheim Christian Day School, received "Buddy" from the lottery system which disperses the calves at the outset of the 4-H project.

"My cousin did it last year and I decided it would be a neat project," he said. Buddy is Jevin's only animal, but he hopes to increase numbers and have three animals to participate in several fairs next year.

Jevin is the son of Gerry and Melva Kready. Nicole Kready, their daughter, won first place in the FFA light heavyweight beef cattle show. The family owns a 100-acre farm, which hosts both layers and heifers.

Jeff Nolt, 17, a senior at Terre Hill Mennonite High School, won reserve champion in the dairy beef competition. Jeff works on the 250-acre home farm, which houses hogs and feeds 150 Holstein bulls.

Jeff's steer, "Jerry," came from an area farm. He also received the calf from the lottery system. Like Jevin, Jeff is a first-year exhibitor in the dairy beef competition. Jeff has eight years of experience with swine.

In the beef ring, Joelyn Donough took home supreme champion placing. "He's heavily muscled and would grade at the upper end," said Brubaker.

"As a cow-calf producer I'm concerned about frame, what suits the industry, and the lowest cost of production," said the judge, who decided Joelyn's steer was closest to fitting the bill.

Reserve champion winner Lisa Pfautz also won with a 4-H animal, an animal which won in the light heavyweight division. Lisa, 20, is employed at a local dairy farm.

"Gert" and Todd Zurin went to the head of the showmanship classes, as Todd took home overall champion showman honors. Todd, 15, goes to nearby Manheim Central High School. A six-year veteran of 4-H, Todd has also shown swine and sheep, besides his two years of experience with dairy beef.

He is the son of Gary and Judy Zurin, Mount Joy, who are involved in helping at the beef ring during the Manheim Fair. The 30-acre Zurin farm hosts crops and 35-40 head of beef cattle.

"Don't save showmanship for showmanship class," urged Brubaker. "As soon as you walk in the ring, you're on the job. Your job is to make your calves look better. You should show just as hard for the type classes as you

Joelyn Donough, left, won first place in the 4-H heavyweight division before taking home supreme champion honors in the beef show. As supreme champion, Donough received the rotating Walter Hiestand Memorial Trophy. Lisa Pfautz, 20, Manheim, won first in the 4-H light heavyweight division before she won reserve champion placing.

Judge Ken Brubaker, Berks County, gave participants and audience alike a showmanship clinic during the afternoon beef shows.

Dairy beef winners included reserve champion Jeff Nolt, Manheim, and Jevin Kready, also of Manheim. Both are first-year participants in the dairy beef program. This year marks the second year for the dairy beef competition at Manheim Fair.

just did for the showmanship class."

To aid 4-H and FFA participants, Brubaker hosted a short showmanship clinic during the afternoon beef shows.

"Your show stick should be pointed down and you should be at a brisk walk," began Brubaker. This "walking out" he said, is in contrast to the dairy ring, where exhibitors walk slowly and backward. "Walking aggressively shows off the animal's stifle muscle," he said.

Brubaker emphasized control of the steer's head. He compared the strap to a gear shift. The animal should respond to the pulling up of the strap and the front feet should be placed on the stop.

The show stick should be a consistent motion, not a choppy sawing. "Don't overpower with the show stick to get their legs set," he said. The hook of the show stick, said Brubaker, can be used to bring the loin down to set hips into the body to make the animal look thicker.

He also encouraged the taller participants to bend over and look less conspicuous behind their animals.

When the judge walks in front of an animal, recommended Brubaker, exhibitors should not switch their hands and lose that little bit of control. Instead, he suggested, simply step back to let the judge see the front view.

Brubaker also had tips concerning fitting. To flatten calves over the loin, clip the hair shorter to make them look thicker, he said. Also, pulling up the hair on the poll and tail head may accent a swaybacked animal.

Brubaker, a 40-head cow calf operator, is a resident of Berks County. Raised in Lancaster County, Brubaker competed at the Manheim Farm Show for 10 years. He has judged sheep and beef competitions at the New York State Fair and various community fairs.

Showmanship winners included Cheryl Ginder, Mount Joy; Matt Quenzer, Manheim; Jason Hollinger, Manheim; and overall champion showman Todd Zurin, Manheim.

Pa. Agriculture Secretary Encourages Support For Montana Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. recently urged Pennsylvania farmers and agribusinesses to help Montana farmers and ranchers affected by the forest and range fires earlier this year by contributing to the "I Care a Ton" emergency hay and forage program.

"Last year, Pennsylvania farmers faced similar circumstances as a result of the drought of 1999," Hayes said. "When our farmers suffered through one of the worst droughts of the century, we received assistance from other states, and now we should return the favor to help those who are in need in Montana."

The Montana Department of Agriculture, the Montana Farm Bureau Federation, and the Montana Department of Livestock are working together to coordinate the relief effort. They seek donations of hay, pasture, fencing supplies, transportation, or monetary contributions. More than 1,200 tons of hay were donated to Montana producers during the first week of the "I Care a Ton" program, following its announcement on Aug. 25.

Montana officials estimate there will be a 1.2 million ton shortage of hay by next spring, because of the fires and an ongoing drought. Transportation needs are as great as the need for hay. In many cases, producers from neighboring states have hay to donate, but are unable to move it from their farms to the Jamestown, N. D., drop point. Contributions of trucking services and funds designated for trucking have become a high priority.

The Burlington Northern Santa Fe railroad has donated the use of 50 boxcars to move incoming hay from the drop-off point in Jamestown to aid in this transportation problem. Agribusinesses and farmers who wish to contribute to this tax-deductible program may contact the Montana Farm Bureau Federation at (406) 587-3153. Additional information about this assistance program also can be found at www.mfbf.org or at the "I Care a Ton" website at www.icareaton.org.

Agriculture Secretary Hosts Farm-City Day Festivities

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. welcomed more than 2,000 schoolchildren to the fourth annual Farm-City Day Celebration at the Farm Show Complex on behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge.

"This fourth annual Farm-City Day is the most exciting to date," Hayes said. "Today, these children will experience Pennsylvania Agriculture first hand as they spend the day enjoying our interactive displays, farm animals and exhibits that explain how agriculture is an important part of their daily lives."

Hayes said more than 2,000 children, from more than 25 schools, are taking part in the day's activities. He said the children will learn how to milk a cow, traverse the outdoor hay maze, explore the "Bat House," see bees making honey, feed and pet farm animals, and watch baby chicks hatch.

Several amusement rides, the Lower Dauphin High school Band, and WRBT "Bob" 94.9 radio station also were on hand for the youngsters' entertainment.

Students had an opportunity to visit more than 50 hands-on exhibits presented by agribusinesses and agricultural organizations as part of the day's events. Class groups also were able to tour the Keystone International Livestock Exhibition (KILE) at the Farm Show Complex.

"Farm-City Day highlights Pennsylvania agriculture in a way that other events cannot," Hayes said. "By seeing all that is here on display, in one day and in one place, students who might otherwise not have the opportunity to observe how agriculture impacts their lives can spend this time with their teachers and classmates experiencing Pennsylvania agriculture."

Steel To Open Grange Convention

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) - The president (Master) of the Pennsylvania State Grange will open the 128th edition of the Pennsylvania State Grange convention by reviewing the past year's accomplishments while offering a vision toward the future to about 800 Grangers during the first full day of the State Session.

The Pennsylvania State Grange convention runs Oct. 21-24 in Carlisle, Cumberland County. The convention is being hosted by the members of the 34 Granges in Adams, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Juniata, Lancaster, Mifflin, Perry and York counties.

Bill Steel said one of the strengths of the Pennsylvania State Grange, with over 25,000 members, is its legislative branch and grass-roots policies that govern the Grange and influence decisions on Capitol Hill.

Some of the legis ative accomplishments of the Grange in 2000 include drought relief funding; land use/growth management legislation; stopping burdensome federal regulations on the agricultural and forest industries; securing funding in the state budget for rural Pennsylvanians; and creation of a stray voltage pilot program.

and use of funds

- Producers (rank and file) that serve on national and state committees that recommend and oversee the use of funds from production to consumer promotion issues
- Polling of producer concerns, issues, and priorities to be used in the decision process of how to spend funds
- Independent economic analysis that determined at least a five-to-one return on investment to producers for their pork checkoff investment
- Market and packer audits that make sure everyone pays their fair share, including vertically owned production
- USDA Inspector General audits that found "no loss or misuse of funds" and that "programs benefit all sizes of producers"
- Independent CPA audits of national and state programs
- Required documentation from retail and foodservice partners that reports incremental sales increases from promotional efforts
- The provision for a producer referendum at any time where 15 percent of bonafide producers petition the USDA.

This is not an exhaustive list; however, it should provide a feel that the pork checkoff program is run in a business-like manner by business-oriented producers.

Doing the right thing in an efficient and effective way also contributes to producer satisfaction and accountability. The pork checkoff was created by and is overseen by pork producers for pork producers.

From Apples To Beekeeping To Chicks, Farm City Day Teaches Agriculture

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At the recent Farm City Day in Pennsylvania's Farm Show Complex, approximately 2,500 children toured the beef, pig, sheep, and dairy barns before checking out the interactive displays, outdoor carnival, and petting zoo.

More than 25 central Pennsylvania schools participated in the event. The day was held in conjunction with the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) to take advantage of the various breeds of farm animals gathered for the competition.

Sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the day featured the slogan, "A story to be told . . . Lessons to be learned."

Outside, children were treated to a fair-like atmosphere, with amusement rides, a straw maze, and a chance to buy popcorn, candy apples, and cotton candy, staples at any self-respecting country fair.

At the display area, students ages second through fifth grade sampled Gala apples from the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Association and fresh carrots from the Pennsylvania Produce stand. They stroked rabbits compliments of the Dauphin County Goat and Rabbit Club, and planted and took home marigolds and alyssum from the Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Association.

Students also met Pennsylvania Beef Council's "Patty Melt," the food safety mascot, or voted for their favorite way to eat a potato.

"What does wool make?" asked Candace Burke, Freeport, to students. Burke's display included several varieties of wool in addition to her spinning and weaving demonstrations.

Other interactive stands included a place to color with newly-introduced crayons made from soy oil at a stand sponsored by the Pennsylvania Soybean board. These crayons are considered to be superior to traditional wax crayons because the oil base makes the color smoother and brighter and is less flaky.

Students also learned of the multiple uses of soybeans, which include candles, building materials, cleaning products, hand lotion, and fuel.

Information was also available from FFA, Christmas tree growers, Pennsylvania Aquaculture, Pennsylvania health and safety displays, and a dairy princess booth.

Jim Hoover, Capitol Area Beekeepers, aided by other members of the beekeeping association and Pennsylvania Honey

Students from Shinnell Elementary School came away with handfuls of wool and some shearing experience under the guiding hand of Christian Herr, Camp Hill, deputy secretary of agriculture.

Students enjoyed the "representative" from the Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Association.

A representative from the Pennsylvania Hardwoods Council explains how wood impacts students' everyday lives through wood by-products. Students were unsure of the use of wood in the sponges, artificial vanilla, and make-up, which led to a discussion on cellulose.

it's working. Each of these kids have managed an area and managed it really well. Young kids are seeing what are they're interested in and picking their specialty areas."

Not only do TLAs oversee general maintenance and inventory of their areas, they are also drafted as teachers as they set up laboratory demonstrations and even deliver an occasional lecture.

"They only get one credit," said Miller. "The real reason they go at it is because they like the area. They run the place."

Miller also sees the TLA position as an excellent resume-builder. "They're already set up to be a lab assistant because they've already done it," he said.

The position changes each semester, with new students moving in to take on TLA responsibilities.

An extensive video library provides another avenue of learning for the students. More than 1,000 titles address specific agriculture, science, and environmental science topics. The titles are cataloged in a computer, which allows students to search by subject or keyword.

In the "wet" laboratory, students perform chemical, biotechological, and genetic experimentation. Last year students inserted a gene into the e.coli bacteria to make it blue. A stereo microscope is attached to a TV screen so all of the students can observe the slides.

Students grow bacteria and plant tissue culture as they learn about microbiology in the school's labs. Here they place plants, as little as one cell, into a special media with essential nutrients a plant needs to grow. Students perform the process in the laminar flow unit which blows the sterile air needed to keep the bacteria from the cells.

"This is actually research lab-like conditions," said Miller. "We hope to develop inventory to sell $7 apiece tubes to other schools across the East Coast. Greenhouse ferns start this way, in a totally sterile environment, so the plants start disease-free and contain no pathogens.

"Our goal here all through the place is not to produce but train kids to success in the agricultural science program," said Miller.

According to Miller, 95 percent of Conrad Weiser agricultural science students go onto a four-year university, with more than 65 percent of those students entering agricultural science-related majors and the remaining students in health and medical fields.

Students study the internal anatomy of fish with teacher Harold Dietrich.

"They don't survive four years here unless they like the science," said Miller.

Approximately 45 broilers have taken up residence in the "animal laboratory" of the agricultural sciences wing. The chicks, which came in when they were about a day old, are now three weeks old. The fence which hems in chicks is portable and will be rearranged to become a residence for lambs and pigs during the school year.

Senior Amy Moyer takes care of the health of the chicks by making sure they have proper light and ventilation and keeping the area clean. As a TLA, Moyer also oversees the nutrition program and checks to see if the chicks can easily reach the food and water.

Moyer will also oversee the upcoming chicken barbecue. After the chicks fully mature they will be sent off to slaughtered, dressed, and returned to the school, where students will finish preparing and host the barbecue.

"It will be adventurous, it's all new," said Moyer.

"It's what the room was designed to teach," said Miller, who wants students to see the farm-to-table aspect of agriculture.

"We only have a minority of kids from farm families," said Miller.

The greenhouse and soil preparation room is Elliot Hoffman's TLA territory. "We can control the heat and climate," said Hoffman. "We can have the desert next to a tropical rainforest because we have climate and irrigation control for every square foot in the greenhouse. This is really college level, almost to the laboratory level with the control we have here."

Interestingly, you won't find any soil in the soil preparation room. Instead, a soil media is used for potting. Besides plans for a dwarf orchard and disease-resistant American Elm and Chestnut nursery, the digging is now in progress for an outdoor turf plot.

In the upcoming year students can also look forward to a symposium where the freshmen will write proposals and get local funding for research projects.

Current projects include nineteen generations of milkweed bug housed in the classroom, or the coral reef slowly building in a tank which mimics Mediterranean longitude and latitude conditions.

In addition, aquaculture students take daily reads on the school's striped bass population. Also 10th grade ag science students will perform caponization surgery this spring.

Academics is stressed, said Miller, who makes sure the students keep a scientist-type journal which features drawings, daily notes, class notes, professional contacts, and extra study.

Twin Valley

At Twin Valley High School, 300 ag science students study environmental, agricultural, and technical areas.

Senior Amy Moyer, a teaching laboratory assistant, takes care of the health 45 broilers chicks by making sure they have proper light and ventilation and keeping the area clean. Moyer will also oversee the upcoming chicken barbecue.

Ag science chair and teacher Ron Frederick has plans for production and sale of plants, plus installation of rainforest plants.

Senior Amanda Hettinger does not have a farming background, but has enjoyed her ag science courses at Twin Valley for four years. "I enjoy working with and learning about animals," said Hettinger. "I also like the students in the classes." In aquaculture class, students learn to install a power filter and fill the tank with decorations, besides cleaning, and checking the water level and temperature of the tank.

These tanks will be used to raise Koi and teach students about fish production.

Robb Meinen Joins Swine Extension Team

By Kenneth Kephart
Penn State

Robert Meinen joined the staff of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science on July 1, as a Senior Extension Associate. He will be working with Ken Kephart and Bob Mikesell in the overall swine extension effort.

In addition, Robb will be helping to deliver environmental education programs for all livestock producers throughout the state.

Until June 30, Robb managed Wide Awake Farms, a 1,400-sow operation in Bedford County. Through Robb's managerial and interpersonal skills, Wide Awake Farms has ranked at the top for productivity in the Purina system nationally for the last six months.

Robb's efforts at the Wide Awake operation also helped him to be one of five producers recognized in the nation for the "Environmental Stewards of The Pork Industry" award sponsored by the National Pork Producers Council.

animal aquaculture/hydroponics area, and a small group ("ag support") room for small group work and informal meetings. The school also acquired better equipment in the renovations.

In agriculture mechanics classes, students learn woodworking and welding and get the opportunity to work on small gas engines, electricity, and wiring.

In the animal science lab, students both care for and observe the small animals. Gerbils, for example, provide lessons on genetic studies and reproduction, as does the school's resident rabbit population. Students also breed guinea pigs and sell the offspring. Rats, snakes, ferrets, amphibians, and one pig are also housed in the lab for student study.

"Most of our students have never been around a pig, period, so basically we're teaching kids ag literacy," said Franklin. "Most of our students are not from the farm."

Harold Dietrich has taught agriculture science at Twin Valley High School for six years. According to Dietrich, freshmen can only take two classes, either an environmental aquaculture science class or an agriculture mechanics class. Older students can take advanced levels of the ag mechanics class besides horticulture, aquaculture, animal science, and environmental science.

A wide variety of students take an ag science course as a biology credit. "We see the whole school. In any class there might be one student from the farm out of 30," said Dietrich. "Because ag is so broad — it is science, it is biology."

The greenhouse area has undergone complete renovation and expansion. This spring, Franklin expects to have a crop of bedding plants to sell to the community.

"We pot individual begonias and impatiens for Mother's Day and sell at the three elementary schools," said Franklin.

"One thing we want to do is put in rainforest plants. The kids have always liked rainforests, so we hope to put in a drip system with orchids and ferns."

Hydroponics projects are also part of the curriculum. "Students get to design their own system," he said.

Senior Beth Hafer has spent four years in the ag science program. "I love forestry. I got into it over the summer at the governor's school and decided to come back to environmental science," she said. "I stuck with it because I love the program."

Hafer is looking at several state schools to further her education in sports medicine or agriculture- education areas.

"I liked working with younger kids with Food For America," said Hafer. Food For America is a monthly program where FFA members teach agriculture and environmental lessons to the districts' third graders.

Twin Valley's 214-member FFA also participates in monthly litter pickups, runs a pet therapy program at a local retirement community, hosts a Christmas tree recycling program, bakes cookies for a homeless shelter, and hosts an Ag Day breakfast for staff and local agribusiness people from the community.

Angela Lengel, a senior, is also a four-year veteran of the program. "I was interested in the environmental aspect, in learning about animals, forestry and wetlands," she said. She plans to attend a state school next year to study marine biology.

WHAT HORSE OWNERS SHOULD KNOW ABOUT WEST NILE VIRUS

On Sept. 26, the Pennsylvania Department of Health reported that two crows collected in Pennsylvania were confirmed positive for West Nile Virus (WNV) at the National Veterinary Services Laboratory (NVSL). These are the first confirmed positive cases of WNV in Pennsylvania.

One crow was collected in the vicinity of Levitttown (Bucks County) on Sept. 8 and the other was collected in the vicinity of Wayne (Chester County) on Sept. 13.

Surveillance, especially in the eastern and northern counties of the commonwealth is ongoing.

What is West Nile encephalitis?

West Nile encephalitis is a brain infection caused by West Nile Virus previously only found in Africa, Eastern Europe, and West Asia. Encephalitis is an inflammation of the brain and can be caused by head injury, bacterial infections, or most commonly, viral infections.

How could a person get West Nile encephalitis?

West Nile encephalitis cases occur primarily in the late summer or early fall. People can get infected from the bite of certain kinds of mosquitoes infected with the virus. Mosquitoes get it when they bite, or take a blood meal, from birds infected with West Nile Virus. Those mosquitoes then transmit the virus to people and other animals when biting to take blood.

People over 50 years of age have the highest risk of developing severe illness because as we age, our bodies have a harder time fighting off disease. People with comprised immune systems are also at increased risk; however, anyone can get the virus.

How could a horse get West Nile Virus?

Horses become infected with West Nile Virus after being bitten by an infected mosquito. There is no evidence that horses can transmit the West Nile Virus to other horses, birds, or people.

What are the signs and symptoms of West Nile encephalitis in horses?

In horses that do become clinically ill, the virus infects the central nervous system and causes symptoms of encephalitis. Clinical signs of encephalitis in horses include loss of appetite and depression, in addition to any combination of the following signs:

- Fever
- Weakness of hind limbs
- Paralysis of hind limbs
- Impaired vision
- Ataxia
- Head pressing
- Aimless wandering
- Convulsions
- Inability to swallow
- Circling
- Hyperexcitability
- Coma.

It is important to note that not all horses with clinical signs of encephalitis have West Nile encephalitis. Other diseases, including rabies, botulism, equine protozoal myeloencephalitis — and other mosquito-borne viral encephalitic diseases of horses caused by Eastern, Western, and Venezuelan viruses — can cause a horse to have symptoms similar to WNV. If you are concerned your horse may be exhibiting signs of encephalitis, please contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture or your veterinarian. Only a blood test can confirm the diagnosis of West Nile encephalitis.

Is there treatment for West Nile encephalitis in horses?

There is no specific treatment for West Nile encephalitis in horses. Supportive veterinary care is recommended.

If my horse is vaccinated for other diseases, will it be protected from West Nile Virus?

No vaccine is available against West Nile Virus. Horses vaccinated against Eastern and Western and Venezuelan equine encephalitis are not protected against West Nile Virus.

How can I prevent mosquitoes from affecting my horses?

There are some easy steps you can take to prevent mosquitoes from affecting your horses. They include:

- House horses indoors during peak periods of mosquito activity (dusk and dawn).
- Avoid turning on lights inside the stable during the evening and overnight. Mosquitoes are attracted to incandescent bulbs that glow yellow.
- Place incandescent bulbs around the perimeter of the stable to attract mosquitoes away from the horses. Black lights don't attract mosquitoes well.
- Remove all birds, including chickens, that are in or close to the stable.
- Periodically look around the property for dead birds, such as crows. Any suspicious birds should be reported to the Pennsylvania Department of Health at 1-877-PA-HEALTH. Use gloves to handle dead birds and place the birds in plastic bags.
- Eliminate areas of standing water on your property. Shallow standing water, used tires, manure storage pits, and drainage areas with stagnant water are ideal mosquito breeding places.
- Topical preparations containing mosquito repellents are available for horses. Read the product label before using and following all instructions.
- Fogging of stable premises can be done in the evening to reduce mosquitoes; read directions carefully before using.
- For help in assessing mosquito exposure risks on your property and for suggested control practices, please contact your county extension office, county department of health, local veterinarian, or mosquito and pest control company.

How can I reduce the number of mosquitoes around my home and neighborhood?

You can reduce the number of mosquitoes around your home and neighborhood by reducing the amount of standing water available for mosquito breeding. Here are some simple steps you can take:

- Dispose of tin cans, plastic containers, ceramic pots, or similar water-holding containers on your property.
- Pay special attention to discarded tires. That's where most mosquitoes breed.
- Drill holes in the bottom of recycling containers left outdoors. Containers with drainage holes located on the sides collect enough water for mosquitoes to breed in.
- Clean clogged roof gutters every year, particularly if the leaves from surrounding trees have a tendency to plug up the drains. Millions of mosquitoes can breed in roof gutters each season.
- Turn over plastic wading pools when not in use. A wading pool becomes a place for mosquitoes to breed.
- Turn over wheelbarrows and don't let water stagnate in birdbaths. Both provide breeding habitats for domestic mosquitoes.
- Aerate ornamental pools or stock them with fish. Water gardens can become major mosquito producers if they are allowed to stagnate. Clean and chlorinate swimming pools when not in use. A swimming pool left untended by a family on vacation for a month can produce enough mosquitoes to result in neighborhood-wide complaints. Mosquitoes may even breed in the water that collects on pool covers; and
- Use landscaping to eliminate standing water that collects on your property. Mosquitoes may breed in any puddle that lasts for more than four days.

Can a horse with West Nile infect horses in neighboring stalls?

No. There is no documented evidence West Nile Virus is transmitted from horse-to-horse. However, if at all possible, horses with suspected West Nile Virus should be isolated from mosquitoes and tested for the virus.

What are the symptoms of West Nile Virus in people?

Mild infections are common and include fever, headache, and body aches, often with a skin rash and swollen lymph glands. Headache, high fever, neck stiffness, stupor, disorientation, coma, tremors, occasional convulsions, paralysis, and death mark more severe infection.

Is there treatment for people?

There is no specific treatment. In more severe cases, hospitalization and intensive supportive therapy may be needed.

Have people died from West Nile encephalitis?

In New York City last summer, seven of the 62 infected people died from the virus. All of the people who died from the virus were 75 or older. Historically, about three to 15 percent of people with WNE have died, especially seniors.

How does West Nile Virus actually cause death in humans?

Following transmission by an infected mosquito, West Nile Virus multiplies in the person's blood and then crosses the blood-brain barrier to reach the brain. The virus interferes with normal central nervous system functions and causes inflammation of the brain.

Is there a vaccine for people?

There is no vaccine for West Nile encephalitis.

What is Pennsylvania doing to prevent a West Nile Virus outbreak?

West Nile Virus has recently been found in dead crows in Pennsylvania. The crows were submitted for testing from Bucks and Chester counties. No positive human or equine cases have been found.

In response to this risk, several state agencies, local governments and health professionals have launched a plan to find and control the kind of mosquitoes known to carry the virus. We are testing animal populations that may act as a host for the virus and monitoring public health to provide early warning if any people get infected.

Has the virus been found in other states?

Yes, in 1999, laboratory-confirmed West Nile Virus positive birds were reported from the Burlington, Hunterdon, Mercer, and Warren counties in New Jersey, which are immediately adjacent to Bucks, Delaware, Northamption, and Philadelphia counties in Pennsylvania. A dead crow found on Oct. 9, 1999 in Burlington County, New Jersey, was only five miles from Philadelphia. Birds with the virus also were found in Saratoga and Albany, N.Y. and Baltimore, Md. in 1999.

New York City, New Jersey, and Connecticut successfully sprayed pesticides to kill infected mosquitoes and to stop further spread of the 1999 disease outbreak. They trapped mosquitoes and tested them for the virus from homogenized pools of the same mosquito species to determine if ongoing abatement efforts were effective.

In 2000, WNV has been found in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and New Hampshire. Positive horses have been found in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts. The European Union has implemented import restrictions on horses coming from these states.

Has the virus been found in Pennsylvania?

Yes. Several infected crows have recently been found in the southeastern portion of Pennsylvania.

Can you get West Nile encephalitis from another person?

No. West Nile encephalitis is not transmitted from person-to-person. You cannot get the virus by touching or kissing a person who has the disease, or from contact with a health care worker who has recently treated someone with the disease.

What is the incubation period?

The incubation period of a West Nile Virus infection is usually five to 15 days.

Do birds infected with the virus die or become ill?

In the 1999 outbreak, large numbers of North American crows and other birds were observed becoming seriously ill and dying.

What about ticks?

Some ticks in Europe and Asia have been found to be infected with the virus. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention also tested ticks in the 1999 outbreak area. Infected ticks cannot be killed by aerial insecticide spraying, therefore infected ticks could prove to be a carrier and transmitter of the virus in the future.

Where can I get more information about West Nile Virus?

Citizens may visit http://www.westnile.state.pa.us/ for future updates or call the Department of Health's toll-free telephone number at 1-877-PA-HEALTH.

Care Of Gestating Beef Cows

Beef cow/calf producers are often guilty of feeding all cows in one group through the winter and I know how easy this makes your chores. This, however, simply cannot be the best practice because cows of different ages and condition need different care.

If you consider that reproduction is the most important thing in a cow herd, you will realize the importance of separating cows bred with their second calf from the rest of the herd. In this group you may also include old cows or thin cows.

Cows bred with their second calves, old cows, and thin cows are usually the ones that have the lowest reproduction rate. The second calf cows are still growing, and they get thin and don't cycle as early as the bulk of the cow herd. In small herds, you may even group your bred heifers with this elite group that we have already organized; although, if possible, they should be fed as a separate group.

Spring calving cows are now entering the middle third of pregnancy and nutritional needs are increasing. For the main cow herd you may use a ration consisting of 20-pounds of grass hay/head/day of about eight percent protein along with a mineral mix. This is enough to meet their nutritional needs.

As for our elite group of old cows, thin cows, bred heifers, and 2-year-olds, nutritional needs are greater and the ration could consist of 16-pounds of grass hay/head/day of about 11 percent protein along with six-pounds of shelled corn and mineral. If corn silage is available, feed 45-pounds per head per day along with two-pounds of shelled corn and 1.5-pounds of 45 percent protein supplement. The main cow herd could be fed 35-pounds of corn silage/head/day to meet their needs.

Sixty days prior to calving an adjustment needs to be made in rations for both groups to compensate for increasing energy needs. Nutritionally balanced rations are the most efficient and usually the least costly. Be careful not to overfeed, underfeed, or waste feed — you cannot afford to in today's cattle economy.

Horse Pasture Workshop Oct. 18

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension will be conducting a horse pasture workshop in Perry County Oct. 18 at the Lutheran Parish Hall in New Bloomfield, from 7 p.m.-9:30 p.m.

The purpose of the workshop is to teach horse owners how to improve the quality of pastures. Topics covered at the workshop will include managing soil fertility, plant species selection, pasture renovation and weed management, poisonous plants, watering and fencing for pastures, and grazing management.

Speakers at the workshop include Melanie Barkley, a county extension agent and grazing specialist from Bedford County, Duane Pysher, grasslands management specialist, Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS), and Greg Strait, Fulton County agent.

Dave Swartz, Perry County extension agent, said, "The workshop is a great way for horse owners to learn how to increase the amount of grass produced in their pastures. Horse owners can then develop a diet for their horses which includes grass. We are privileged to have a group of very knowledgeable speakers for this workshop."

For more information, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in Perry County at (717) 582-5150. Cost for the workshop is $10. The fee includes materials and refreshments.

Meiser Family

"I told him, if you could find lumber, you'd have a business," said Terry, who was in the lumber business for 20 years as part owner and operator of Meiser Lumber Company.

"I knew how difficult it was getting timber. I spent a lot of time and money finding timber when I was in the business, and that was years ago," he said.

"We spent three months putting together the business, the system, and how we were going to work it," said Nathan. "The first few months were spent figuring it out, deciding if it was something we wanted to do." The company, Timberleads, began by the beginning of March.

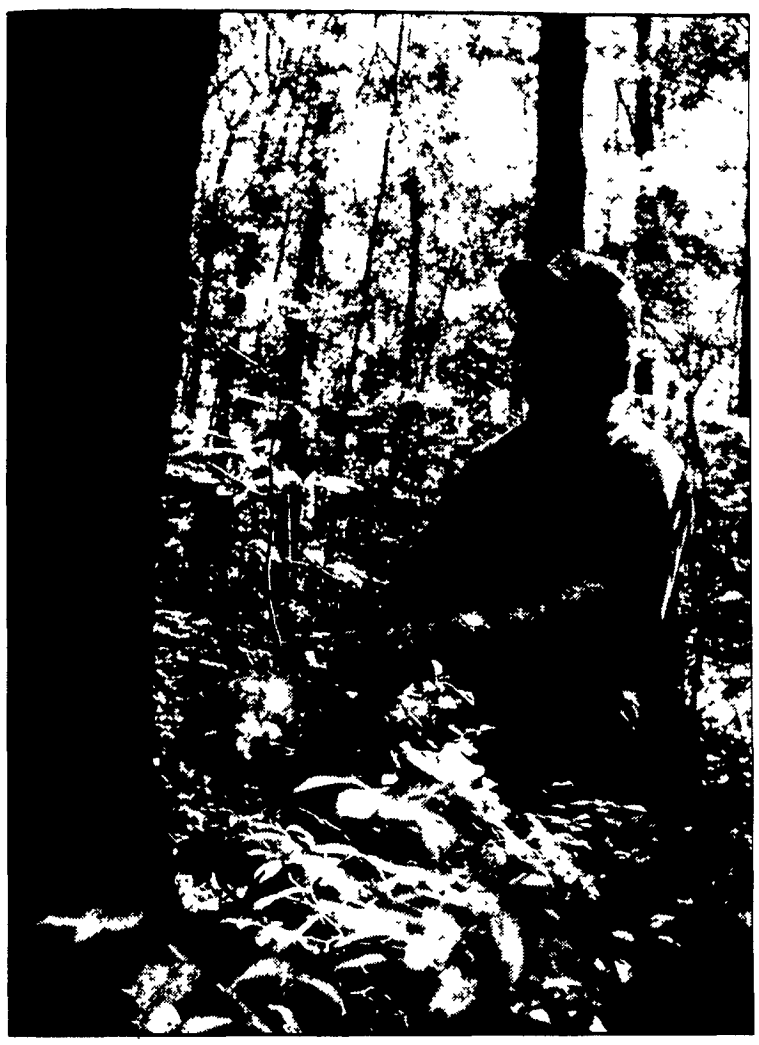
The Meiser family divides up the workload. Nathan takes care of the leads and contacts from the farmers, Terry handles the timber subscribers, and Terry's daughter Kathy oversees "everything else," said Terry, which includes administrative, bookwork, scheduling, advertising and marketing responsibilities. Terry's wife, Jennie, is "our biggest cheerleader," said Nathan.

The family operates with help from outlying "referral sources" such as retired county agent Tony Dobrosky, who makes contacts with producers in the York County area for TimberLeads.

"We had to find a way to bridge a gap with people outside the area, so we started using referral sources," said Nathan.

"The business is new and will take a little while before the farmers catch on," said Dobrosky.

(Turn to Page A38)



If full-scale timbering is not an option, thinning the trees may lead to greater yields in the future, an alternative the Meisers explore at this woodlot. "If you get too many stems per acre they won't grow to the maximum amount," said Terry.

Nathan Meiser checks out the size of a tree to help determine the value of the timber in a woodlot. TimberLeads will follow up with a packet of information for the producer.

Meiser Family

The TimberLeads wheels begin to turn when a landowner makes contact with the business.

"We schedule an appointment to take a look and see if there is commercial timber there," said Nathan. It could be 5 acres or 100 acres, but if 5 acres has good timber and we can work with it, we'll try to get it sold."

Checking out the land has led the Meisers to large and small tracts of land, and farms all over Pennsylvania.

Pockets of woodland can be found almost anywhere, such as the timber hidden on an old homestead, according to Terry. "Most farms had a tract of woodland somewhere, in case they wanted to repair the barn," said Terry.

Either the Meisners or Dobrosky will make the initial trip to the woodlot to determine the type and value of the timber available. During this trip they also estimate the feet of logs in a tree, a number judged from the stump to where the tree begins to split into branches at the top of the tree.

According to Terry, who entered the timber business in 1976, "Timber used to be cut a lot smaller, but rising production costs made younger trees not really worth taking in," he said. "Starting in the '80s smaller trees weren't worth anything, so people starting leaving them, which is good. So now the economics of the thing took care of itself."

The time needed to check out a lot depends on the size of the lot plus the terrain, said Nathan. "If it's only five acres you can get in pretty quickly to determine if it's an option for a commercial sale," said Nathan.

"The terrain also makes a difference. If you're walking on the side of a mountain, it takes longer."

Although larger lots pose more of a challenge, TimberLeads checks out much of the acreage.

"If you have a 70-acre lot, 20 acres may not be as nice, but there may be 20 acres that are," said Nathan.

Although five acres are a benchmark amount for TimberLeads, smaller amounts of acreage can be sold, said Nathan.

"We try to work with people who have less than that. It may just take longer to make a sale," said Nathan. Meiser also said that terrain is a consideration on which lots are bought by the sawmills.

"If it's really rough terrain and hard to get into, there's much more expense involved in the logging operation," said Nathan.

The Meisers give a landowner packet to the producer, which gives step-by-step information on the TimberLeads buying and selling process. The packet also includes forms for the landowner to fill out with basic information on the acreage, determine their goals for the timber sale, and information the landowner should get from the timber buyer.

Landowners have the option of letting the timber buyer mark and take out the timber, or hiring a consulting forester to handle everything for the landowner.

'We try to tailor our service to whatever the landowner wants to accomplish," said Nathan.

TimberLeads charges subscribers an initial start-up fee and a percentage for each lot the subscriber buys, rather than the previous monthly subscription fee. According to Terry, this allowed the "niche mills," with a narrower scope of timber bought, to take advantage of the business. "When we changed that (commission versus monthly subscription charging), we signed up a lot of them in a hurry," said Terry.

For additional information, the TimberLeads Website is located at www.timberleads.com.

To reach people outside the Meisers' immediate area, TimberLeads utilizes the connections of retired county agent Tony Dobrosky, left, who makes contacts with producers in the York county area for TimberLeads.

Farm City Day

Queen Renee Blatt, gave out both information and popular "honey sticks," plastic tubes with honey samples.

According to Hoover, one of the goals of the day was for him to make contacts with teachers. "I made five or six presentations last week," said Hoover, who will teach all age groups about honey.

Besides answering questions, Hoover discusses pollination, drones, queens, and the function of bees in his presentations.

Hoover sees Farm City Day as valuable to all facets of agriculture. "Here kids get out and see why farms are important and what comes from a farm. All phases of farming are represented," said Hoover.

These chicks come into the world with a crowd of schoolchildren rooting for them.

State Junior Dairy Winners Selected

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In a scene reminiscent of a three-ring-circus performing under the "big top," junior animals from across Pennsylvania competed Monday for top breed honors in the State Junior Dairy Show. The junior show was the opening cattle exhibition event of the annual Eastern National All-American event, held at the Farm Show building.

Three judges and a host of extension and support staff kept the three arenas running smoothly and concurrently as nearly 1,000 dairy animals competed in seven separate breed shows. Junior exhibitors were treated to "dressed up" main arena of the Farm Show building, brightened with cherry red curtains, a display of colorful flags, accented with dozens of colorful plants and greenery adding to an overall festive appearance.

Type judge for Holsteins and Red and White cattle was Loren Elsass, Wapakoneta, Ohio, while Rachel Tanis, Richmond, Virginia, evaluated showmanship. Dave Kjome, Rochester, Minnesota, handled the placings for the Milking Shorthorns, Guernsey and Brown Swiss shows, with Beth Cooley, Allenwood, judging showmanship. Ayrshires and Jerseys came under type judging of Kevin Lutz, Lincolnton, North Carolina, and showman winners were selected by Nancy Toms, McCallisterville.

Junior champion of the Ayrshire breed was the fall calf exhibited by Christian Fulkman, New Wilmington, Lawrence County, "Van DeRomeo Candita." In the reserve junior champion spot was Elaina Rader, Connoquenessing, Butler County, with her winter calf "Bonniebrae Brooklyn." Best junior bred and owned animal was also exhibited by Elaina Rader, the spring yearling "Homestead Acres T P Bessie."

Dubbed a "total package" by Judge Kjome was the senior and grand champion Brown Swiss, "CIE Betta Vue Rambo Ashley," the 5-year- old exhibited by Josh Geiwitz, Volant, Lawrence County. Jason Larson, Smethport, McKean County, claimed the reserve senior and grand champion with his 4-year-old "Irons Blowpop." Best senior animal bred and owned honors went to Lisa Jones, Airville, York County, with her "Stone Fence Emorys Lilac," the first-placed junior 2-year-old.

Terri Johnson, York, York County, topped the Guernsey breed show as grand champion with her senior 2- year-old "Rutter Bros. Fayettes Lizzy," a tall, stylish young cow cited by judge Kjome as "one of the best 2- year-olds I've ever seen." Placing in the reserve senior and grand champion slot was Aaron Gable, New Enterprise, Bedford County, with a 4- year-old "Cedar Fringed Altann." Best senior bred and owned animal also went to Terri Johnson, with her junior 3-year-old "Rutter Bros. Enhancers Lily."

Amy Guyer, Derry, Westmoreland County, snagged two top heifer-class honors with "Hi Field Brighton Jaycie," here winter yearling selected both junior champion and best junior bred and owned. Reserve junior champion Guernsey was "Trotacre Mr. Luck Ann," the summer yearling exhibited by Holly Liggett, Bessemer, Lawrence County.

Holstein champion exhibitor Scott Walton, Carlisle, Cumberland County, turned most of his entries over to friend Kyle Burdette to handle in the ring because he was also competing in the junior judging invitational event running concurrently with the show. Walton wrapped up the grueling day of class placings just in time to see his 5-year-old "Tower- Vue Tab Jasmine," waved into the senior and grand champion spot.

Named the Holstein reserve senior and grand champion was "Beshore Adan Juniper," the aged cow entry of Angie Beshore, New Cumberland, York County. Best senior bred and owned entry was the third-placed senior 3-year-old exhibited by Aaron Ruck, Andreas, Schuylkill County, "Ruch Jolt Corry-ET."

Adeptly handling a stylish junior calf almost taller than himself was Corbin Wood, Littlestown, Adams County, who earned junior champion and best junior bred and owned honors with "Penn Gate Rubens Flower." Reserve junior champion was the tall, angular fall yearling, "Brush-Creek-Vu BC Kasper-ET," exhibited by Amanda Cessna, Everett, Blair County.

Senior and grand champion honors over the Jersey breed were won by the 6-year-old "Eastmont Donna Jon," exhibited by Trisha McIlwain, Morris, Tioga County. In the reserve senior and grand placing was Daniel Newcomb, Ulysses, Potter County, with his first-placed junior 3-year- old "Jer-Sweet Ace Katie- Bug." The senior 2-year-old, "ELS Brook Mary-Two," exhibited by Erica Lloyd, Pottstown, Chester County, was named best senior animal bred and owned.

Senior and grand champion honors of the Milking Shorthorn show went to the senior 3-year-old "Kuszluk Cattle Co Lucy," exhibited by Jessica Whiting Kennedy, Butler, Butler County. Lane Whiting, Edin-

'Ewes' Flaunt Their Best Looking Good Is Their Specialty

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Ewes in an array of white and natural-colored hues were combed to look their woolly best for the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE) Leadline Competition, Harrisburg, last Saturday.

Leading the showy ewes were girls between the ages of 10-18. They, too, were dressed in their woolly best with fashionable outfits designed to portray the beauty and versatility of the natural fiber — wool.

Not only were the girls and their ewes judged on appearance but also on the contestant's skill in leading a sheep around the show ring. Stubborn, unpredictable, and frisky ewes add to the difficulty of the contestants maintaining poise and control under the watchful eyes of three judges and the audience.

Many of the contestants have competed at local and regional shows. Some have placed at the annual KILE competition in other years. Despite past successes, the contestants are never quite sure how their sheep will react and how judges will interpret their abilities to maintain control under pressure.

This year's senior division winners went to Emma Little, first; Bethany Tuhacek, second; and Shelby Harrison, third.

Emma made a three-piece coordinated wool ensemble to take first place. Her stunning outfit featured hand-dyed wool pieces appliqued with a wool blanket stitch on her fully-lined jacket and slacks.

Only 14, Emma has placed first for three out of the six years at competition. Emma has been sewing since second grade.

Accompanying Emma was Daphne, a registered Cotswold yearling ewe. Emma said that the Cotswold is an ancient breed dating back to the Roman Empire. Each year, her Cotswold produces 10-12 inches of lustrous curly wool.

In addition to the Cotswold, Emma raises Jacob and Border Leicester sheep on her parents' Harford, Md. farm.

Emma is a sophomore at Harford Technical High School studying agricultural science in preparation for a career in large animal science.

She is president of the Harford County 4-H Shepherds Club, a member of the 4-H Livestock Club, an FFA member, and is the Maryland Lamb and Wool Princess.

Bethany Tuhacek wore a black worsted wool jacket and pants outfit, which she made to take second place in the senior division.

The 18-year-old led Maggie, her Dorset ewe, wearing a leopard-print scarf that matched Bethany's sleeveless fitted top.

On her parents' Harleysville farm in Montgomery County, Bethany raises Dorsets for breeding and market lambs and natural colored crossbreds for wool. She also has a belted Galloway heifer and market hogs.

Bethany is a freshman at Delaware Valley College, majoring in large animal sciences. She is a member of the Block and Bridle Club, animal science club, and a community service club. Bethany will attend the National 4-H Congress in Atlanta.

For a third-place win, Shelby Harrison, Saegertown, Crawford County, led a Tunis ewe. The natural brown shading of the Tunis coordinated with Shelby's dark brown jacket trimmed in herringbone tweed cuffs and collar with matching skirt.

Shelby's jacket was accented with a sheep pin that she made from wool, hand spun using a drop spindle..

Shelby, 14, raises market lambs and is a six year member of the Coon's Corners 4-H Club, where she is secretary and news reporter. She is also a 4-H ambassador and a freshman at Cambridge Springs High School.

She enjoys art, sports, hunting, hiking, and haying. She plans to pursue animal and wildlife studies with a possible career as a veterinarian.

In the intermediate division, Laura Hunter, Stockton, N.Y., placed first; Megan Van Wie, Clayton, N.Y., placed second; and Alice Phillips, Perkiomenville, placed third.

Twelve-year-old Laura Hunter modeled a navy blue doubled-breasted wool blazer and matching tailored pants. She lead a yearling ewe from her flock of Polled Dorsets.

Laura is in seventh grade at Cassadaga Valley High School, where she plays volleyball and basketball, is a member of chorus, and plays the French horn in the Junior Band.

She is active in church and enjoys showing horses, downhill skiing, reading, and just being a Junior champion Lindsey Beatty captured points for her flattering wool outfit and for maintaining poise and control while leading Vanna, a Polled Dorset yearling ewe around the show ring.

In the intermediate division, Laura Hunter, right, led a Polled Dorset yearling ewe to show the attractiveness of the breed, and modeled a wool pants suit to show the classiness of wearable wool. Third-place winner Alice Phillips, Perkiomenville, led a Corriedale yearling ewe outfitted with a saddle and carrying Alice's doll dressed in a matching outfit.

OMESTEAD OTES

Emma Little, right, made a three-piece wool ensemble and led a registered Cotswold yearling ewe, for first place in senior competition at the KILE leadline. Bethany Tuhacek, left, and her Dorset ewe Maggie placed second.

Not everyone comes to show animals, some like the Maleski family come to buy. From left, Paul, 6; Angela, 13; Cecilia, 8; Jacinta, 11; and Loretta, 9; compare the different breeds and decide they want to purchase a Suffolk. Their grandpa Matthew Maleski, Carbon County, brought the children to KILE because it's a great place to see the best of each breed.

Megan's black wool pant's suit was accessorized with a tartan scarf that Megan made. The St. Lawrence tartan symbolizes Megan's hometown; the blue represents the St. Lawrence river, the green is for evergreens, and the red is for sunsets.

For eight years, Megan, 12, has competed at the Jefferson County Fair, where she has won awards for super junior showmanship, grand champion Suffolk ewe and flock. She demonstrates halter and showing techniques to younger 4-H members.

At Thousand Islands Middle School, Megan is on the principle's honor roll, a member of band and student council, and plays soccer, basketball, and softball.

Alice, dressed in a red wool jumper and red wool cowgirl hat, attracted attention by leading a Corriedale yearling ewe outfitted with a saddle and carrying Alice's doll dressed in a matching outfit.

The 11-year-old is in her third year of sheep club and is secretary of the club.

Alice is homeschooled and is active in church and community activities.

Junior division winners included first-place Lindsey Beatty, Enon Valley; second place Courtney Cowden, Prosperity; and third-place Katelyn Melvin, Washington, Ohio.

Lindsey wore a sage green plaid, cropped jacket on top of a solid green wool dress.

The 10-year-old led Vanna, a Polled Dorset yearling ewe.

Lindsey is a member of the Animal House 4-H Club and enjoys showing registered Polled Dorsets and market lambs. She is in fifth grade at Mohawk Elementary School, where she enjoys cheerleading and choir. She is also active in church and 4-H activities.

Ten-year-old Courtney, dressed in heather wool pants with a brown and mauve plaid wool vest, led a Dorset ewe, Elizabeth, which sported a matching wool sash.

Courtney is active in 4-H and shows Dorsets at local and state levels. She is a fifth grader at McGuffey Intermediate School and enjoys playing piano.

Katelyn modeled a wool two-piece outfit. The heather gray skirt was topped with a mustard-colored wool blazer. The 10-year-old led a Montadale ewe.

Katelyn is a member of the National and Ohio Montadale Junior Association and shows at local, state, and national levels since she was three years old. This year she showed at the All American Junior Show in Franklin, Ind.

Katelyn is a member of Country Clovers 4-H Club and is in fifth grade at Eastside Elementary.

Contestants such as Kelly Gehman, Quakertown, made an attractive appearance even if they did not place in the top three.

Wool Warms Leadline Exhibitors During Shivering Temperatures

First-place winner Joellyn Donough and her ewe Fantasy.

In the male division, Radell Peters placed first. He enters the annual competition consistently to prove that "guys do wear wool."

New technology removes the scratchiness of wool and allows the fabric to breathe for a comfortable feel.

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Wool warmed ewes and exhibitors during Monday night's unseasonably cold temperatures.

The annual Manheim Community Farm Show Leadline offers a chance for sheep to be presented in the most elegant manner and for the exhibitor to wear clothing that touts the attractiveness and versatility of wool. Participants are judged on poise, presentation, control, and appearance.

Male and female contestants were judged separately.

To capture first place in the female division, Joellyn Donough, 13, wore a navy vest with green and navy plaid shorts. A matching bow in the same fabric was tied around the neck of her lamb Fantasy.

In her fifth year of 4-H involvement, Joellyn raises sheep, swine, and beef on her parents' Ed and LaRue Donough's Manheim farm.

Second place went to Kelsey Binkley, daughter of Dan and Beth Binkley, Conestoga. She wore a purple and blue plaid suit while leading her Dorset ewe sporting a scarf.

Third place went to Bobbi Bentzel, daughter of Ed and Linda Bentzel, Manheim. Bobbi wore a multi-colored sweater, black wool pants, coat, and hat. A tenth grader at Manheim Central, Bobbi also is active in 4-H Woolies and the Exchange Club.

In the male division, Radell Peters placed first. He enters the competition consistently to prove, "Guys do wear wool," he said. "New technology removes the scratchiness of wool and allows the fabric to breath for a comfortable feel."

Radell led a Dorset ewe lamb with a black wool scarf.

The son of Ray and Becky Peters, Elizabethtown, Radell is a student at Mt. Calvary Christian School, a member of the 4-H livestock judging team, and involved in his churches puppet ministry and sound tech.

Second and third place went to brothers Mike and Doug Musser respectively. Mike, a senior at Donegal High School, wore dark blue Shetland wool sweater and gray flannel slacks. His lamb Skeeter wore a knitted wool scarf, made by Mike's mother, around his neck.

Doug, 9, led a lamb named Lollipop with a spiffy black bow tie. Doug was dressed in black wool worsted trousers, gray vest, cowboy hat, and boots. The brothers are the sons of Ken and Linda Musser, Mount Joy.

Manheim Community Farm Show Queen Stephanie Feister is crowned before Lead Line competition. Stephanie said the Farm Show means a week of fun for the whole family to enjoy. Stephanie is active in FFA and lives on a horse farm with her parents Mike and Diane Feister, Manheim.

Marketing specialists call it "value added."

That's taking a basic commodity-type product or service and enhancing it in some way which increases its desirability to some other person or entity.

Or, in other words, more saleable — worth more bucks — than it was to start with.

Like ready-to-serve chocolate milk, for instance. Sliced, diced, and somewhat-pre-cooked frozen French fries. Pre-patted hamburgers. Already baked bread, cookies and pies. Pre-cut, pre-arranged, fresh flowers.

Those are all value-added goods we've taken for granted for years. Stores are full of such items that have been enhanced to make them more useful, more attractive, more time-saving.

I'm in awe — in envy, if you will — of what the retailing business comes out with in value-added year after year. Some of it in the "now why didn't I think of that?" category. Other more along the lines of "do we really need this?"

Hustling through the produce section of a local supermarket a few weeks ago, intent on grabbing lettuce, celery and hightailing it to the register, I was stopped dead in my tracks by a new product. Packaged in a fancy plastic "squirter" bottle, like the ones containing tub-n-tile-type cleaners, the label proclaimed it to be a fruit and vegetable "washing" product.

What constituted a produce washing liquid was intriguing enough that I paused to pick up one and read the label. In addition to water, it contained some sort of citric acid product (lemon juice, maybe?) and a few other minor, relatively innocuous ingredients. Within a day or so, a coupon showed up in the mail for a similar product, this one including vinegar.

Uhhh, whatever happened to good ole' water and soap? And who decided those weren't good enough for getting apples and celery clean?

Why, the "value added" marketers, that's who.

On the heels of that mystifying and amusing find came a flyer in the mail from one of my favorite craft franchise stores. While I have little time to do "crafts," those stores stir my imagination with ideas of wonderful things to do with my spare time. Someday.

One of the specials advertised, along with other seasonal items, was for straw bales.

"Straw bale" announced the flyer, in ¼-inch, dark black letters, followed by the price in ¾-inch black letters..."$8.99."

To this farmer, that sounded a bit pricey for a bale of straw, which we generally sell to neighbors wanting to seed lawn, or cover strawberries, or bed their dog boxes, or shoot archery, for a couple of bucks. What really blew my mind was the — literally — fine print. Those straw bales were 9-inches by 9-inches by 18-inches.

$8.99! For a baby straw bale? Now THAT'S value added.

Deciding that it was time to get into the value-added business, our grandsons trekked to the fields to gather a batch of cornstalks which The Farmer had run down on field corners as he chopped silage. Using recycled bale strings, — and some help from their mother — they tied stalks into decorative corn shocks, set them up on a busy corner of our rural residential neighborhood with a "For Sale" sign, in a marketing ventured geared to generating a few dollars spending-money for these fledgling capitalists.

The corn shocks sold. Bags of salvaged ear corn packaged up for squirrel-feed sold. Even a pumpkin, set there for decoration with no price tag...sold.

I'm debating crawling up into the straw mow and typing together neat little clusters of the plentiful mounds of loose straw resulting from mice chewing off the bale strings. Even at $5 each, maybe I could undercut the baby-bale competition and still turn a tidy profit on my own value-added venture.

Even as I write this, a coupon has arrived for yet another product promoting itself as a "natural" produce cleaner. This one is for a dry powder in a plastic shaker container. It contains...baking soda.

In our current consumer environment, where the hottest-selling beverage is water, why should I be surprised?

Do you prefer a tart or sweet apple? Want it juicy or crisp? Green, red, yellow or a mixture?

Pennsylvania apples offer a multitude of choices for those with differing personal tastes. Some taste better fresh, while others are better cooked or made into applesauce.

Some of the old rules pertaining to select varieties being better for applesauce and pies no longer apply. Red Delicious, once delegated to eaten fresh, has been successfully made into applesauce and pies by those desiring to reduce their sugar intake.

True, that variety isn't everyone's favorite. But that's what makes experimenting with different varieties the means of determining your own favorites.

Apples are in abundance and available from roadside stands and supermarkets, and, if you're lucky, your own backyard. Regardless of where you find apples, you'll find them highly adaptable to today's selection of recipes. Here is an easy one using canned pie filling, but you can make your own pie filling using in-season apples.

WARM APPLE SPICE CAKE

- 1 frozen pound cake, thawed
- 21-ounce can apple pie filling
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- Cinnamon ice cream (optional)

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Slice pound cake in half horizontally. Place the two halves in 8x8-inch pan. In medium bowl, combine apple pie filling, cinnamon, and nutmeg; mix well. Spoon apple mixture over cake. Bake at 425 degrees for 10-15 minutes or until warm. Serve warm with cinnamon ice cream, if desired. Serves 6.

'A Lot Of Who I Am Has Come From 4-H'

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — Jill Darr, 19, a sophomore at Penn State Altoona Campus, said, "A lot of who I am has come about from being a member of 4-H. The program has taught me so many life skills in order to be successful in the future."

The daughter of Scott and Sue Darr, Jill lives with her parents in a big farmhouse along Kline Road.

On Oct. 5, Darr was recognized as the Pennsylvania Outstanding 4-H girl by the Pennsylvania Livestock Association (PLA). The organization presented state youth awards at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition at the Farm Show complex in Harrisburg.

By working closely with 4-H leaders, her parents and peers, Darr says what grew out of a decade of 4-H involvement was the sense of responsibility, good sportsmanship, cooperation, appreciation, values and traits, that are so important to her now.

As a youngster, however, her first experiences were typical of those any kid might have entering a show ring for the first time.

"I was very nervous," she recalls. "I definitely experienced the butterflies-in-the-stomach feeling. My experience with a pig at the fair was a total circus."

Still, she would recommend a pig as a good animal for an incoming child who is just starting to show.

"It is an overwhelmingly intimating first experience for a child," Darr says, but she has observed that judges go out of their way to help the kids be comfortable so they feel encouraged to come back, rather than defeated after the first try.

Darr said the PLA award came as a great surprise and being honored as its recipient culminates her years of 4-H in a memorable and beautiful way.

Darr, who has two sisters — Andrea, 17 and Alicia, 13 — first joined a 4-H club to get more information about handling her beloved horses.

Jessica Darr, Somerset, the Pennsylvania Outstanding 4-H Girl, has a heart for horses. She is pictured with Victor, a Belgian stallion owned by her father, Scott Darr. He raises registered Belgian horses for a hobby.

The top trophies from the three species she has shown in a 10-year 4-H career represent meaningful awards for Jessica Darr of Somerset, who has arranged them on the staircase. She, recently was selected the Pennsylvania Outstanding 4-H Girl.

"I had this vast interest in horses and joined a 4-H club to learn more. It was through 4-H that I got to show my first horse, Darr said.

"My mom and dad always supervised when I was around horses," she said. "A horse is like a person you have to get to know so you can accomplish what you want to do. A lot of trust is involved. A quiet voice and a quiet hand allow them to trust you," Darr said.

"This basic trust helped me down the road when I started showing lambs," Darr said about the new species she added two years ago.

With 4-H horse projects, Darr's awards have been many, running the gamut from county, district and state level shows. She has had a state champion, state reserve champion, and placed in the top five.

Outside of 4-H, in the American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA) Darr additionally, has shown in 15 states, ranging from Pennsylvania to Texas where her horse placed 7th in the Aged Gelding class, during the Youth World Championship Show.

Recently, the horse she showed at Texas was sold. He was Hercules — nicknamed Herc — and a very well known 1992 Quarter Horse Gelding of tremendous size. Darr said with a keen sense of pride that Herc's weight was probably 1,300 pounds.

She has competed, as well in the Quarter Horse Congress held in Columbus, Ohio.

Today, for a hobby, Darr's self-employed dad also raises registered Belgian horses on the family's 50-acre farm, where he and his wife operate Keystone Vacuum, Inc. He keeps a stallion, two brood mares, and several head of young stock. Mr. Darr is also an independent milk hauler.

Darr says that 4-H is a great place for kids who are learning to handle and manage animals, to learn people skills, as well. These are critical tools to possess, whether at a youth show where one might encounter ill will, or, with society at large.

"I take competition very seriously," Darr acknowledges, "but, I am just as happy to see a friend of mine win."

As a competitor I don't think you can let an antagonist get to you, whether it is in the show ring, in a job, school or life in general," concluded the junior 4-H leader and past holder of almost every possible 4-H office.

Besides serving on 4-H County Council, Darr has assisted with instruction at horse camps and Champ Camp for sheep.

At the Somerset County Fair, Darr placed in the class and in the showmanship division with her hogs. At the Farm Show her market swine placed in the class and she garnered master showman honors.

The state Farm Show is actually where she got her feet wet with lambs. That venue is where her first lamb was showed. It placed in the class and she was named master showman. More recently, at the 2000 Somerset County Fair, her market lamb was reserve grand champion and she won senior division showman.

In the Westmoreland County Lamb Classic, her lamb was the reserve grand champion, and she also participated in the Indiana County and Dayton Fairs in Pennsylvania. In the 2000, first ever State Jackpot Show in Harrington, Delaware, Darr's lamb was named reserve grand champion.

At the Pennsylvania Special Winter Olympics Darr's volunteerism exceeds 100 hours of work, but, a for-pay job on weekends is at The Gap located in the Galleria Mall, Johnstown.

Within a short time Darr will declare her college major as marketing and agricultural business management. "I am getting ready for the big move to main campus next year," she said.

ANSWER — Elaine Fyock, Windber, wanted recipes with cute farm titles. Here is one from Mary Myers, Felton, which she says originally came from a cookbook from the Texas area.

Cow Chip Cookies

2 cups butter
2 cups sugar 2 cups brown sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
4 eggs
4 cups flour
2 cups uncooked rolled oats
2 cups crushed corn flakes
2 cups pecans or other nuts
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 large package chocolate chips

Melt butter and cool. In large mixing bowl, combine sugars, eggs, and vanilla. Mix well, add butter. Gradually add flour, baking soda, and baking powder. Mix well. Add oatmeal and corn flakes. Fold in pecans and chocolate chips. Measure dough with ice cream scoop, and place on greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 12 minutes.

ANSWER — Here's a different recipe using mint tea. This is from Arlene Landis, Ronks.

Orange and Lemon Mint Tea

2½ cups water
1½ cups sugar
12-ounce can frozen lemon
6-ounce can frozen orange
1 cup firmly packed mint green tea

Use only tender tops and leaves of mint tea. Boil water and sugar 5 minutes. Pour over tea and cover tightly, allowing to stand one hour. Strain and squeeze out the juice. Add the lemon and orange juices. Freeze until ready for use. When servings, add 3 quarts water to 1 quart concentrate.

ANSWER — Charles Cramer, New Market, Md., wanted the potato salad recipe printed in the 1970's "Lancaster Level Flow Cookbook." Thanks to Leta Fickes, Newville, for sending one.

Potato Salad

15 medium potatoes, cooked, diced
1 cup celery
5-6 eggs, hardboiled
3 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ cup vinegar
2-3 cups mayonnaise
Salt to taste

Combine eggs, sugar, and vinegar in a saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cool. Add potatoes, celery, hard cooked egg, and mayonnaise.

Note: This dressing recipe can also be used to make macaroni salad. Cook 3 cups macaroni until soft. Drain and rinse in cold water.

Here's another salad dressing variation from P. Savin, Townsend, Del. She writes this is good for potato, macaroni and coleslaw dressings.

Salad Dressing

3 eggs
Not quite ½ cup sugar
Not quite ½ cup vinegar
Dash salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
2 teaspoons corn starch
1 cup milk

Mix dry ingredients with egg, getting lumps out first. Add vinegar. Stir and add milk. Cook in heavy saucepan or double boiler. Stir constantly until thickens.

ANSWER — L. Groff wanted a recipe for ground cherry pie. One was printed in last week's issue, but here are some more recipes using ground cherries. These are from Emma King, Gordonville; Anna Joyce Martin, East Earl; and Verna Moyer, Manheim.

"More-ish Cake'

½ cup shortening
2 eggs
2½ cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk

Mix together ingredients to form cake batter.

Combine the following ingredients and spread on bottom of 9x13-inch cake pan:

⅔ cup firmly packed brown sugar
⅔ cup butter, melted

Add a single layer of washed ripe ground cherries. Pour batter on top and bake one hour at 350 degrees or until cake tests done.

Delicious hot or cold with milk or ice cream.

Ground Cherry Spread

8 cups ground cherries
1 quart water

Boil 10 minutes. Add:

3 packages fruit pectin
7 pounds sugar

Boil 3 minutes. Pour into jars and seal or freeze.

Ground Cherry Preserves

6 cups ground cherries
1 cup water
8 cups sugar
¼ cup lemon juice
1½ cups light corn syrup

Combine fruit and water in a large kettle. Bring to a boil and simmer for 10 minutes. Add sugar, lemon juice, and corn syrup. Bring to a boil again and simmer 30 minutes. Remove from heat and cool overnight. Next morning, heat to boiling. Pour into hot jars and seal. Makes 8 half pints.

Ground Cherry Pie

2½ cups ripe ground cherries (should be yellow)
½ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon flour
2 tablespoons water
Pastry for 2 9-inch crusts

Wash ground cherries and place in unbaked pie shell. Mix sugar and flour and sprinkle over cherries. Sprinkle water on top. Cover with top crust. Seal edges securely. Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minutes. Reduce temperature to 375 degrees and continue to bake for 25 minutes. Makes one 8-inch pie.

Instead of a top crust, you may want to cover with crumb mixture before baking. Here are two from Anna Joyce Martin.

Crumbs

¾ cup flour
½ cup brown sugar
⅓ cup butter

Combine flour and sugar, cut in butter until crumbly. Sprinkle on pie before baking.

Crumb Pie Topping

1 cup quick oats
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup brown sugar
3 cups flour

Combine quick oats, salt, sugar, and flour. Cut in butter until crumbly. Sprinkle on pie before baking.

ANSWER — Pat Elligson, Millers, Md., wanted a recipe for Devil's Food Tunnel Cake. Thanks to Dorothy Stoms for sending a recipe.

Tunnel Of Fudge Cake

1½ cups butter, softened
6 eggs
1½ cups sugar
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 package Pillsbury two layer size butter cream double Dutch frosting mix
2 cups chopped walnuts or pecans

Generously grease 10-inch Bundt pan. In large mixer bowl, cream butter. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Gradually add sugar, creaming until light and fluffy. By hand, stir in flour, dry frosting mix, and walnuts until well blended. Pour batter into prepared pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 60-65 minutes. Cool one hour; remove from pan. Cool completely before serving.

Tips: Buttercream Double Dutch frosting mix and walnuts or pecans are essential to the success of this recipe.

Since this cake has the soft tunnel of fudge, ordinary doneness tests cannot be used. Test after 60 minutes by observing a dry, shiny brownie-type crust.

Cake may be baked as directed in a 10-inch tube pan. Do not invert to cool.

ANSWER — For Harry, who wanted steam pudding recipes. Here are two from Dorothy Stoms.

Grandma's Steamed Pudding

2 cups sifted flour
4 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons sugar

Sift together dry ingredients, add 2 tablespoon shortening and mix until crumbly. Then add:

1 beaten egg
½ cup milk

Mix thoroughly. Wrap dough in clean cloth and place in colander over boiling water. Cover tightly and steam over low heat for four hours. Serve with plenty of milk.

Makes 4 generous servings. For variation, add 1 cup cherries or raisins to the dough before steaming.

Grandma's steamed puddings were a treat that no one else could match. I remember the day when I asked her for the recipe and she said that she didn't have one but mixed it together just so! I soon found that the secret was in the steaming. She steamed it in a cloth for four hours.

Estelle Steamed Pudding

2 tablespoons butter
2½ tablespoons sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup raisins
2 cups flour
3 eggs, well beaten
¾ cup milk

Cream together butter and sugar. Stir in flour and baking powder that have been sifted together. Gradually add combined eggs and milk. Beat until smooth. Fold in raisins. Pour into a floured cloth or bag. Place in a colander over boiling water and steam 35 minutes. Serve with sugar and cream.

This is a richer pudding than Grandma's, having more butter and eggs. Short steaming does not give the "brown flavor" of the one steamed for hours.

Wet Weather Brings Molds and Mildew

After a dry summer, we've been catching up on rainfall. Sometimes in a big hurry. As a result, many households are experiencing problems with mold and mildew growth in the home. For some people, it is only a nuisance to have the black spots growing on the walls, furniture, and elsewhere throughout the house. For others, it aggravates their allergies causing respiratory difficulties among other problems.

If you are concerned about the effects on your health that may be related to biological pollutants such as mold and mildew, before discussing your concerns with your doctor, you should know the answers to the following questions. This information can help the doctor determine whether your health problems may be related to biological pollution.

Does anyone in the family have frequent headaches, fevers, itchy watery eyes, a stuffy nose, dry throat, or a cough? Does anyone complain of feeling tired or dizzy all the time? Is anyone wheezing or having difficulties breathing on a regular basis? Did these symptoms appear after you moved to a new or different home? Do the symptoms disappear when you go to school or the office or go away on a trip, and return when you get back?

Do visitors to your home experience the same symptoms? Are the problems worse in one room or part of the house than in another? Have you recently remodeled your home or done any energy conservation work, such as installing insulation, storm windows, or weather stripping? Did your symptoms occur during or after these activities?

Does your home feel humid? Can you see moisture on the windows or on other surfaces, such as walls and ceilings?

What is the usual temperature in your home? Is it very hot or cold?

Have you recently had water damage? Is your basement wet or damp? Does any part of your home have a musty or moldy odor? Is the air stale? Do your houseplants show signs of mold? Have the air conditioners or humidifiers not been properly cleaned?

The answers to these questions can also help pinpoint the source of the problem.

There is no simple and cheap way to sample the air in your home to determine the level of all biological pollutants. Sampling the air is not a useful problem-solving tool according to experts because it is almost impossible to know which biological pollutant(s) cause various symptoms of health problems.

A better approach to a solution is a self-inspection or walk through of your home using your nose and eyes. Two likely culprits are high moisture and lack of ventilation or air circulation.

Dust and construction materials such as wood, wallboard, and insulation contain nutrients that allow biological pollutants to grow. Firewood stored indoors is a source of moisture, fungi, and insects. Appliances such as humidifiers, kerosene and gas heaters, and gas ranges add moisture to the air.

Musty odors, surface moisture, or water stains may be coming from air conditioning units, basements, attics, crawlspaces, bathrooms, carpets, heating and air conditioning ducts, humidifiers and dehumidifiers, and refrigerator drip pans.

What can you do to control the moisture in your home? First, fix any leaks or seepage. If water is entering from the outside, your options range from cleaning or adjusting the downspouts and gutters, adjusting the grading of the soil around the house to increase the slope, to extensive excavation and waterproofing. Water leaks in pipes and around tubs and showers should also be repaired.

A plastic cover over dirt in crawlspaces will prevent moisture from coming in from the ground. Crawl spaces should also be well ventilated to prevent build-up of moisture that can rot the joists.

Always use the exhaust fan in the bathroom and over the range to expel excess moisture. Dehumidifiers and air conditioners will reduce the moisture level of the air in your home.

Pay special attention to carpet on concrete floors. Carpet can absorb moisture and serve as a place for biological contaminants to grow. Instead, use area rugs that can be washed often.

For more information on biological contaminants in the home such as molds and mildew, check out the following web site at EPA: http://www.epa.gov/iaq/biologic.html. Tips Make Life Easier (NAPS) — Here's a tip to take advantage of. Reading a new book full of timely tips may help you manage your time, home and money.

The book Family Circle 2000 Hints and Tips (Doubleday, $12.95) was created by Family Circle, a magazine which has been described as "the family's best friend." Here are a few useful tips to remember:

• To hammer in a nail without splitting plaster or drywall, drop the nail in a pot of boiling water for 15 seconds, drain, remove, and hammer in.

• Keep apple and banana slices from turning brown by placing them on a plate containing a small amount of lemon-lime soft drink.

• To silence creaky floors, sprinkle talcum powder between the floorboards.

• To keep the bathroom mirror fog-free after a shower, clean it regularly with shaving cream instead of glass cleaner.

• A little rubbing alcohol on a rag will remove felt-tip ink stains from kitchen countertops. Hair spray removes ink from most fabrics.

The book contains a stain removal chart, fix-it advice for everything from leaky faucets to a gouge in a wood floor, tips on saving at the supermarket, and a list of handy web sites.

The book is available wherever books are sold.

Ways To Spend Less

Learning how to spend less can almost be a full-time job. It takes skill and practice to find the best ways to stretch your family's dollar. Here are 10 ideas to help you think of ways to cut your spending. Talk about these ideas with other people. See how many examples you can get for each of the 10 cost-cutting ideas.

• Don't Buy It. Apply this idea first. Ask yourself if you really need this item. If it's a "want" item, ask yourself if there is anything else you want more. Give yourself time to think about it. There are very few items to buy that won't wait a day or two. A "last chance" isn't often the last chance. If you have a very hard time not buying, stay out of stores. When you do go, take only the money you must have for your real needs.

• Borrow. Sometimes you can borrow an item you need, especially if it's something you don't need very often. Borrowed things need to be returned in good condition. What things do you have that you are willing to loan? Remember the library or other public services when it comes to borrowing.

• Share. Often we can stretch our money by learning to share items with our family and friends. Neighbors can sometimes share the price of a bushel of apples and save money. We share recipes, ideas and sometimes our skills with others. Sharing usually means that everyone benefits as a result of getting together on an idea or project.

• Substitute. When you go to buy something, ask yourself if something at a lower price would do the job almost as well. Many products have very good substitutes, and sometimes you find the substitute was better than the original.

• Use Wisely. One way of stretching money is to find ways to make the things we buy last longer. Almost every product we buy needs some kind of care. See if you can find ways to make the items you buy wear longer, last longer or keep from spoiling before you use them up.

• Find The Best Buy. It often takes time and energy to find the best buy. The best buy for you is the item that will serve your needs best at the lowest possible price. Finding the best buy may mean looking in several places — a catalog, newspapers and two or three different stores. Sometimes secondhand stores offer the best buy. If you know exactly what you need or want, it will be easier to find the best buy for you.

• Make It. Sometimes you can get something for less money by making it. This means you supply some of your know-how, labor, and time. The cost of the materials should be cheaper than the finished product. Be sure to check prices before you decide to make it. Sometimes a factory can turn out an item for less money than we would need to pay for supplies to make it.

• Rent Or Hire. When you need something for only a short time, it could be cheaper to rent it. What kinds of things can you rent in your community? Count such things as coin-op laundries. Sometimes we rent things when the cost of equipment is too high for our budget.

• Find It Free. The goods and services we can get for free really help to stretch our money. Our tax dollars buy things for the community that everyone can use. Parks, playgrounds, community health services, and many other items may be available to you.

• Trade. Do you have things in your home that you no longer need or want? Sometimes these things have value to other people. Sometimes you can trade them for things you need. Sometimes you can sell them to others who can make use of them. What items could you trade to others? What skills do you have that you could trade with a neighbor or friend for something they may have that you do not?

KILE Kids Compete In Agri-Kid Olympics, Other Fun

It's difficult to race while pushing a pumpkin in a wheelbarrow and rounding a corner without it tumbling to the ground.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The pumpkin wobbled on the wheelbarrow as Morgan Livingston sped around a pole and slid to the finish line. Both the wheelbarrow and pumpkin remained upright — a necessity when competing for the trophy in the Agri-Kid Olympics.

For many kids attending the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE) last week, agri-olympic activities scored high on their list of favorite things to do.

Hay bale toss, ring toss, and the pedal tractor pull are some of the competitions that draw competing kids and a cheering audience composed of parents, grandparents, siblings, and bystanders.

In addition, BJ the Clown entertains with magic tricks. A petting zoo is available in addition to admiring hundreds of sheep, hogs, horses, and beef vying for top honors at the annual event.

Here are some photographs of kids enjoying KILE festivities.

The Agri-Kid Olympic events were sponsored by Lebanon Valley Farmer's Bank/Fulton Bank and the pedal power tractor pull by Evergreen Tractor.

Agri-Olympics and the pedal tractor pull score high on the list of kids' favorite things to do at KILE.

Cody Young petals to a first-place win in the 5-year-old division of the annual tractor pull at KILE.

How does he do that? Kids of all ages are intrigued by the tricks BP The Clown manages to pull off.

In the 3-4-year-old division, first-place Garret Livingston said he practices on his pedal tractor at his Seven Valleys home. In second place is Ridge Betts, Felton, Del.

These kids find a spot to watch kids agri-olympics at KILE.

Squeezing lunch in between showing Corriedales, Shropshires, and Suffolks, from left, are John Brigich, 12; Blake Grice, 6; and Brent Grice, 13. Blake and Brent are the sons of Becky and Bruce Grice, sheep breeders from Washington County.

Learn Egg Basics

Eating fin fish once or more per week is a healthy food and certainly will enhance your diet. Research reported in the New England Journal of Medicine indicates that fish contain omega-3 fatty acids which may lower blood cholesterol levels and help avoid the development of coronary heart disease.

Fish that are rich in omega-3 fish oil are salmon, tuna, bluefish, mackerel, sardines and trout. It is recognized that seafood, in addition to being low in saturated fat, is an excellent source of high-quality protein and many essential vitamins and minerals. The tiny, soft bones found in canned salmon, for example, are entirely edible and are a good source of calcium.

Two fish high in omega-3 fatty acids are conveniently available canned in your supermarket salmon and tuna. Infinitely adaptable, either can be used straight from the can in soups and chowders or in a variety of main dishes.

Consider storing a couple of cans in the refrigerator ready for spur-of-the-moment chilled salads and appetizers. Canned salmon and tuna combines well with other healthy foods; pair with whole grain cereals, fiber-rich vegetables or legumes. When planning to use tuna buy solid pack for cold plates, chunk for salads and casseroles and flaked for sandwiches and appetizers.

Green and Gold Fettuccine with Salmon and Tuna is easily put together with ingredients on hand. For the foundation, choose pale-green spinach pasta or golden egg noodles or go Italian style with a combination of both referred to as "straw and hay." A light garlicky sauce, made with olive oil, contains freshly ground black pepper, finely chopped parsley and other fresh herbs (dried herbs will also do nicely). Chunks of salmon and/or tuna are added to the sauce and gently heated. Garnish with seasonal fresh vegetables: carrots, broccoli, and asparagus — whatever looks the most appetizing.

A sprinkle of freshly grated Parmesan cheese gives the finishing touch to a light and elegant seafood-pasta entree. We've come a long way since tuna noodle casserole.

Green and Gold Fettuccine with Salmon and Tuna

- 2 cans (6.5-7.5 ounce each) salmon or tuna, drained
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- ¼ cup minced fresh parsley
- ½ teaspoon dried or 2 tablespoons minced fresh oregano
- ½ teaspoon dried or 2 tablespoons minced fresh basil
- 8 ounce plain and/or spinach fettuccine
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- Grated Parmesan cheese
- Vegetables to garnish

Cook fettuccine according to package directions. Blanch matchstick carrots, asparagus spears or broccoli florets for garnish, if desired.

Break salmon and/or tuna into large chunks; remove skin if desired. Heat olive oil in large skillet. Saute garlic until golden. Add parsley, oregano, basil and ¼ teaspoon black pepper; saute 30 seconds. Pour half of the herb sauce over cooked fettuccine; toss. Arrange on large, heated platter and keep warm. Add salmon and/or tuna with lemon juice to remaining sauce. Heat, stirring gently, just until seafood is hot. Spoon over hot fettuccine. Garnish with vegetables, if desired. Serve with grated Parmesan cheese. Yield six servings. Recipe can be halved using salmon or tuna and plain or spinach fettuccine.

Do you know the differences between the types of shell eggs on the market today?

• Fertile eggs are produced by hens which have mated with a rooster and, if incubated, could develop into a chick. They are not, however, more nutritious than non-fertile eggs, do not keep as well and are more expensive to produce. There are no known advantages to consuming fertile eggs.

• Free-range eggs are produced by hens raised outdoors. Due to seasonal conditions, though, few hens are actually raised outdoors. Some egg farms are indoor floor operations and these are sometimes erroneously referred to as free-range.

• Organic eggs are produced by hens fed rations with ingredients that were grown in a way that preserves the integrity of the soil. This includes minimal use of pesticides, fungicides, herbicides, and commercial fertilizers. No commercial laying hen rations ever contain hormones.

Due to higher production costs and lower volume per farm, both free-range and organic eggs are more expensive to produce than eggs from hens raised in cage or floor operations or fed conventional rations, but their nutrient content is not affected.

• Vegetarian eggs are produced by hens fed rations containing only vegetable foods.

• Nutrient-enhanced eggs have been created by varying the hen's diet. There are shell eggs on the market with reduced saturated fats and increased unsaturated fats. Others have a higher percentage of Omega-3 fatty acids, the ones found in fish which may be beneficial. Still others have added vitamins or minerals. These eggs are found under various brand names and, depending on feed costs, at various prices. Check labels for nutrient facts.

Some people ask if adding salt to the water prevents eggs from cracking when they're hard boiled?

• No. Salt doesn't prevent cracks. Cracking occurs when boiling causes steam to build up inside the shell. When too much steam builds up or the steam builds up too rapidly, it escapes by bursting through the shell. Rather than boiling, use this more gentle hard-cooking method to help prevent cracking:

Place eggs in single layer in saucepan. Add enough tap water to come at least one-inch above eggs. Cover. Quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand, covered, in the hot water about 15 minutes for large eggs (12 minutes for medium, 18 for extra large). Immediately run cold water over eggs or place them in ice water until completely cooled. Refrigerate in the shell for later use or remove shell for immediate use.

To remove shell, crackle it by tapping gently all over. Roll egg between hands to loosen shell. Peel, starting at large end. Hold egg under running cold water or dip in bowl of water to help ease off shell.

For other basic egg recipes, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: The Incredible Edible Egg #79, P.O. Box 733, Park Ridge, IL 60068-0733.

Wool Fashions Help Take Connecticut Woman To Top At Big E Competition

Contestants in the Sheep and Wool Fashion Show anxiously await the judges' decision for the selection of championship honors at The Big E in West Springfield, Mass. Pictured from left are Kathleen Rasys of Brimfield, Mass.; Amanda Buffington of North Dighton, Mass.; Jessica Hopkins of North Scituate, Rhode Island; and Leah Gankofskie of Windham Center, Conn. The next edition of The Big E will take place September 14-30, 2001.

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Hilary Sepe, a 19-year-old sophomore at the University of Connecticut in Storrs, Ct., sewed and knit an outfit that gained the admiration of judges at the Big E Sheep and Wool Fashion Show in West Springfield, Mass. She won grand champion honors for her ensemble, made of fine, versatile wool fibers.

Sepe, competing in a competition that features the versatility of wool and woolen fibers, knitted a coral-colored long-sleeved sweater from a pattern found among her mother's knitting books. She also sewed a simple mid-length black wool skirt, worn with dark shoes and stockings. She led a natural-colored (black) ewe, named Spotless, from her own small flock of sheep.

The contest helps to promote wool as a simple yet elegant fiber that can be used in a variety of ways. Many of the contestants have spun wool yarn from their own sheep, then knit or crochet it into a sweater, hat, or other garment. Other contestants purchase woolen fabric and then create an outfit that can take them from casual outings to formal gatherings.

In addition to modeling the outfit in front of a panel of judges, the contestants, both male and female, lead a sheep beside them through the ring. They are judged on garment construction, poise, appropriateness of the garment to the individual, and the sheep itself — behavior, cleanliness, and condition of the fleece.

Sepe is majoring in animal and food science at UCONN. She keeps busy as the Connecticut State FFA president and the recording secretary of the UCONN Block and Bridle Club. She also assists first year students in preparing animals for the Little International Livestock Show at UCONN.

Reserve grand champion honors went to Jeanne Grenier, of North Stonington, Ct. The winner of the adult division, Grenier hand-knitted a charcoal gray sweater of 100 percent Merino wool. The sweater featured a light gray yoke and has a circle of black-faced sheep around the yoke. The coordinating gray wraparound skirt was made of 100 percent Pendleton wool. Grenier led a Tunis sheep in the competition, a sheep known for it's light red face and legs.

Next year's edition of The Big E takes place Sept. 14-30 in West Springfield, Mass. with an outstanding lineup of agricultural competitions, exhibits and entertainment for all ages.

Pfautz's Heavyweight Hogs Manheim Championship

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Three times in 19-year-old Lisa Pfautz's lifetime of showing hogs, she has claimed the grand championship market hog title. This year, she knew that she had a good hog for the final county fair of the season — Manheim Community Farm Show.

"But you never know the competition or what will happen," Lisa said of the coveted grand championship.

Competition was keen. With eight heavyweight classes out of 120 hogs, Lisa's 260-pound hog was in the first class of heavyweights. Right from the start, the judge for the show, Ken Winebark, was impressed with the hog that he described as having an extremly long extension, nice balance, and a meaty butt. When all the class champions returned for the final showdown, Winebark pointed out the eye catching qualities of each one, but the heavyweight champion was the one that had it altogether and was problem free.

"We do our own breeding," Lisa said of the hogs her brothers and parents Rick and Sue Pfautz, Lititz, raise.

Taking reserve champion honors was Derrick Bollinger's 261-pound heavyweight.

It was the fourth grand champion or reserve title for Derrick at the Manheim competition.

Judge Ken Winebark selects Lisa Pfautz' 260-pound crossbred as the grand champion market hog at Manheim.

"All have the same genetics," Derrick said. "We raised seven for showing and picked the best to come here — our hometown.' Derrick said.

Showmanship was divided into four classes. The top three winners in each division included the following:

Amy Becker, Eric Ober, and Travis Donough, 16 and up; Ashley Kreider, Nichole Kreider, and Brian Geib, 14-15-year-olds; Joellyn Donough, Michael Shearer, and Johanna Rohrer, 11-13-year-olds; Derrick Hanna, Ashley Shearer, and Brian Nolt, 8-10-year-olds.

Fair board member Earl Geib said livestock entries at the fair are record breaking. "We are maxed out. We literally have no more room to house animals."

Although the crowd bundled up and complained about the unseasonably cold weather at the beginning of fair week, Geib said that the weather had a positive impact.

"Cool weather keeps animals from getting sick. That's important in tight corners."

Showmanship champions in each division, from left, are Derrick Hanna, 8-10-years; Joelynn Donough, 11-13 years; Ashley Kreider, 14-15 years; and Amy Becker, 16 and up.

Derrick Bollinger shows a 261-pound crossbred to take reserve grand champion market hog honors at Manheim Community Fair, Monday evening.

pork
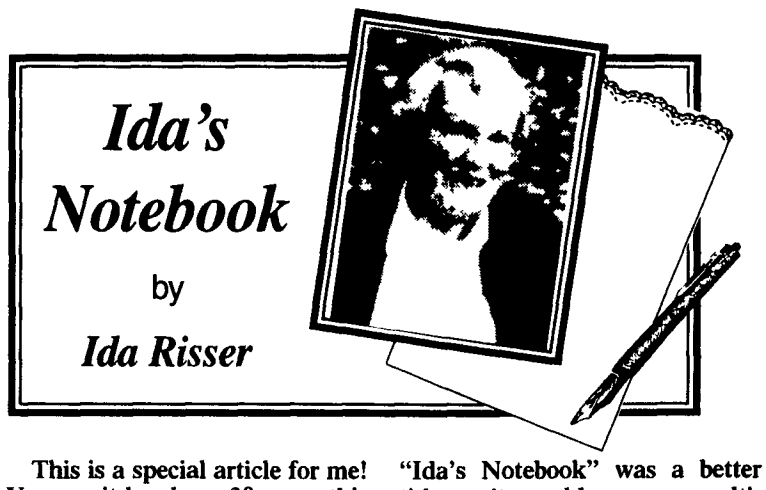
National Pork Month



This is a special article for me! You see it has been 30 years this month that I began to write for Lancaster Farming newspaper. At that time it was published in Lititz, but now it is stationed in Ephrata.

I do not believe that I ever missed a week even when I was traveling through Europe and later to Hawaii. That adds up to 1,560 articles. It has become a weekly routine to sit down and write to all the Lancaster Farming subscribers.

I'd venture to say that not many writers have continued for so long. My first article appeared in the issue of October 17, 1970, which had 28 pages in two sections. The September 30, 2000 issue had 192 pages in four sections.

Zane Wilson was the managing editor and he visited me after I sent him an article that I thought would be of interest to the readers. I wanted to call the column "Down On The Farm" as our dairy farm "Manheimdell" is "down" along the Conestoga River. But, he thought "Ida's Notebook" was a better title as it would cover a multitude of topics. I guess he was right. Ever since I was 17-years-old, I have written a diary every single day. Two drawers are overflowing with my diaries.

The 1970 Lancaster Farming paper was in black and white. It contained information on cow shows and cow sales. But, there was only one advertisement for a public sale of farm machinery. Today there are many, many advertisements as I surely know when I type the "Sale Reports" for the paper.

Both Farm Women groups and Granges were given prominence in the 1970 paper. Two articles were also written on an FFA Convention in Kansas City and one in New York City by the 600,000 member FHA.

Over the past 30 years, I've shared a lot of good and bad happenings in my life with the readers. I have always enjoyed writing, and somehow the paper and I have grown older together.

Rita Mae Brown Will Greet Her Fans At The 55th Annual Pennsylvania National Horse Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Author Rita Mae Brown is an accomplished equestrian who loved the Pennsylvania National Horse Show as a child.

Brown, now Master of Foxhounds for the Oak Ridge Fox Hunt Club in Virginia and a polo player, returns to the show for the first time since childhood on Hunt Night, Monday, Oct. 16. Her fans are invited to meet her from 5:30-6:30 p.m. in the setting in which she feels most comfortable — surrounded by horses.

Brown has written 26 books, many of them set in the fox hunting country near her Afton, Virginia home. Her credits also include a half dozen screenplays and more than a score of teleplays, several of which received Emmy nominations. Her most recent book, "Pawing Through the Past," was published in April, 2000.

After meeting fans and signing autographs, Rita Mae Brown will spend the remainder of Hunt Night enjoying the Pennsylvania National Horse Show and perhaps presenting a trophy or two.

The Pennsylvania National Horse Show is the country's largest multi-breed indoor horse show, with more than 1,400 top horses and riders from nearly every state and Canada competing. The show runs Oct. 12-21 at the State Farm Show Arena, Harrisburg.

General admission tickets are $10 for adults, $5 for children under 12 and seniors, except for Saturday, Oct. 21 when all tickets are $10. For tickets or a free brochure, phone (717) 975-3677 or visit www.panational.org.

South African Youth Explore The 4-H Movement

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A contingent of 15 South African teenagers and adults is attending the 2000 Big E to learn about the American 4-H movement. The 11 youths, aged 13 to 17, and four adult teachers and agricultural judges are residents of Mpumalanga province, located in northeastern South Africa. Sponsored by South African Airways, the group is exploring the 4-H system in the United States and hoping to establish an exchange program between the two countries for youth in agriculture.

In addition to attending the numerous 4-H shows and competitions that take place during the fair, the eight boys and three girls are competing in beef and dairy showmanship contests using the livestock of American 4-H participants. The Big E also arranged for the group to visit a large dairy farm in northwestern Connecticut and tour the University of Connecticut School of Agriculture.

One of the secondary goals is to set up a reciprocal exchange program, so that some of the two nations' children can attend and compete in each other's agricultural shows. International competition is always a good thing.

Latigo 4-H

At its September meeting, the Latigo Club discussed what topic club members want to use for their Educational Equine Exhibit at the 4-H State Horse Show.

Junior Weekend of the Pennsylvania National Horse Show will be Oct. 14-17. Horse judging training sessions are this fall, and the Horse Council Awards Banquet will be Friday, Nov. 3.

The club's next meeting is Oct. 20 at Hideaway Hills at 6 p.m.

What's The Difference Between Apple Juice And Apple Cider?

Surprisingly, there's no good answer in differentiating between apple juice and apple cider.

In a country that regulates the "standard of identity" for everything from ketchup to jams and jellies to evaporated skim milk, there's no such standards for apple cider.

Some people say apple cider and apple juice are just the same — they're both 100 percent juice pressed from apples. If you line up behind that reasoning, the term "cider" is just a marketing ploy, aimed at people's preference for the beverage during the crisp days of autumn, perhaps after a hayride or during a Halloween party

Some people say that cider contains more apple pulp and other solids, resulting in a slightly thicker beverage with, perhaps, a cloudy appearance. That might be what people think of when they think "cider," but there are no official federal regulations stating that.

Besides, most of what's sold as apple juice in the United States is "clarified" juice — filtered to remove all sediments. That means that there's also such a thing as unclarified juice — that's "juice," not cider.

In England, "cider" is an alcoholic beverage — juice allowed to ferment. We call that "hard cider" in the states.

Just a few years ago, consumers might have thought that apple juice was heat-treated to be shelf-stable, while cider was the raw juice — no heat treatment, no preservatives, nothing. But outbreaks of E. coli 0157:H7 in both untreated apple juice and cider in recent years have led to some safety regulations regarding juice and cider processing.

While unpasteurized juice and cider may still be sold, they must contain a label saying: "Warning: This product has not been pasteurized and therefore may contain harmful bacteria that can cause serious illness in children, the elderly, and persons with weakened immune systems."

It's important to remember to follow labels regarding refrigeration, even for pasteurized products. Pasteurization isn't sterilization. Proper pasteurization will eliminate E. coli 0157:H7 in juices and cider, but tougher strains of bacteria might survive in small numbers. Proper handling is essential to assure the safety and quality of the product.

ANSWER — A reader wrote that she and many other seamstresses often have difficulty discerning the right and wrong sides of fabric. She wanted to know if the holes along the edge of the fabric are punched from the right or wrong side or if that varies and is not a clear indicator. Thanks to a Kinzers reader who wrote that the holes along the edge are not a determining factor in revealing the right side of fabric. Instead, take a hold of the width on a straight edge, placing thumbs and forefingers about 2 or 3 inches apart, pull slightly. Whichever side the fabric curls to indicates the wrong side. If it doesn't curl, there is no difference between the wrong and right side. But always mark the inside of the fabric so the finished piece has an even look.

In dry weather, the pile can be watered.

Milk, Lactation Expert Honored As Outstanding Alumnus

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre co.) — Thomas W. Keenan, Blacksburg, Va., professor of biochemistry at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, is one of six recipients to receive a 2000 Outstanding Alumnus Award from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

The award recognizes outstanding graduates and provides opportunities for interaction among the college's alumni, students and faculty.

Keenan's research has contributed to a greater understanding of mammary gland biology and milk secretion, benefitting academic and industrial aspects of dairy science, as well as biomedical aspects of human breast cancer.

Keenan has written more than 200 refereed scientific papers covering a wealth of topics, including composition and properties of cell membranes, synthesis of milk components, fat droplet formation, secretory mechanisms and the biochemistry of milk. He is considered an international authority on the synthesis and secretion of milkfat globules.

His honors and awards include being named Senior Research Fellow of the Max-Planck Society in 1988, receiving the Purdue University Cancer Research Award in 1978, and garnering the Samuel Cate Prescott Award for Research in Food Sciences from the Institute of Food Technologists (IFT) in 1974.

Keenan was elected Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1991. He is a member of the American Dairy Science Association, the American Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology, and the International Society for Research on Human Milk and Lactation.

A native of Portage, Keenan received his bachelor's degree in dairy science from Penn State in 1964, and earned master's and doctoral degrees from Oregon State University in 1965 and 1967, respectively. He taught at Purdue University from 1967 through 1981, and started at Virginia Tech in 1982.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Strength in livestock judging.

Knowing critical agribusiness management points.

Those two made for a championship strategy for the top overall individual early this week during the Keystone Stockman's Contest at the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE).

Joe Emenheiser, 17, Felton, bested 229 other contestants during the 23rd annual contest at the state Farm Show Complex.

Joe said his strength was in livestock judging. He was a member of the county 4-H livestock judging team that won two years in a row and went to national competition.

"It's something I just wanted to try, and I did all right," he said.

Joe noted that he raises sheep but "I do better with the other two" (beef and swine), he noted.

The son of Ben and Sharon Emenheiser, Joe scored a grand total of 564 points on the contest, which combines elements of a skillathon with management and other challenges. The contest is open to FFA members, 4-H members, and college students. The competition tests their live animal knowledge and verbal skills, providing students with valuable agri-industry related learning experiences.

Joe has a flock of 45 head of breeding sheep. He is involved in Boy Scouts and in his local church.

The eight-year York 4-H member is a senior at Red Lion High School. A member of the school's wrestling team, Joe is considering pursuing an animal science degree at Oklahoma State University.

Joe was also honored with the Pennsylvania Livestock Association (PLA) 4-H Boy Award during KILE opening ceremonies.

Second place went to Nicole Ross, Central FFA Team A, with 559 points. Third went to Laura Galante, Fairfax County Virginia 4-H Team, with a total of 548 points.

Placing beef in the contest was Cheryl Fairbairn, Chester County livestock agent. Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist, placed the swine class. Ron Miller, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture division chief, livestock and fairs, Bernville, place the sheep class.

Paul Craig, Dauphin County agent, placed the hay judging class. Joan Grim placed the meats identification class.

The contest included livestock breeds, quality assurance, feed and equipment identification, housing and safety, and a management quiz. Also, Chet Hughes, Lancaster County agent, placed the quality assurance and Dan McFarland, Penn State ag engineer, placed the housing and safety classes, according to Linda Spahr, York County agent and contest coordinator co- chair.

Following is a list of show placings.

Using Loaders, 3-Point Implements Requires Safety Focus

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Driving a tractor with a front-end loader or with three-point hitched implements takes special skill, and a farm safety expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said children age 14 or older should have extensive training in using these add-ons before operating the tractor.

Farmers can assign appropriate farm tasks to their children using the newly developed North American Guidelines to Children's Agricultural Tasks (NAGCAT), said Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering.

"Children age 14 to 15 can operate tractors with front-end loaders and three-point attached equipment, but they should be limited to tractors between 20 and 70 horsepower," he said.

Murphy said children should know that tractors outfitted with front-end loaders can become less stable when driven with the loader raised. "It's probably a good idea to limit children to chores on relatively flat ground," Murphy suggested.

Before starting the job, Murphy recommends that the child and an adult check to see that all safety features are in place and that the work area has no hazards. "Be sure to check all hydraulic lines for leakage or wear," he said.

Murphy said younger children can operate a tractor with nonpowered trailed implements such as a cart or wagon. He suggests children age 12 to 13 should be limited to tractors of less than 70 horsepower. Children 14 and older can operate any tractor, as long as it is not an articulated tractor. Adults should supervise and check on a child's progress every 15 or 30 minutes.

He also recommends that the child wear hearing protection, non-skid shoes, and long pants. In the summer, the child also should wear sunglasses, sunscreen, a long-sleeved shirt, and a wide-brimmed hat. "If the child has long hair, it should be tied up," Murphy said. "The child should be able to hitch and unhitch the implement before using it."

When training a child for any tractor-related chore, adults should thoroughly demonstrate the task at the work site at least five times and supervise the child closely.

"When operating a tractor with any trailed implement or front-end loader, a child should have a cell phone, CB radio, or walkie-talkie to allow communication with a parent or adult supervisor," he said.

Penn State offers a free publication, "Children and Safety on the Farm," which shows parents and others how to make farms safer for children. Single copies are available free of charge by contacting your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or by calling the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

Parents or other professionals interested in the NAGCAT guidelines can buy booklets of six to 10 posters covering similar agricultural tasks or a professional resource manual by calling Gempler's, a Belleville, Wis., safety supply company, at (800) 382-8473 or by visiting the firm's Website, http://www.gemplers.com.

There is several hundred feet frontage on 2 public roads. Improved with a 125 year old log and frame 3 bedroom dwelling with vinyl siding. On-site water well and septic system. Also improved with a German-Style bank barn with storage area on the upper level and housing for livestock on ground floor. There is also a cement block garage, a springhouse and other outbuildings. The farm is enrolled in the Clean and Green program. Besides its obvious use as a cattle farm, crop farm, truck farm, horse farm or gentleman's country estate, the land has development potential as well. The land is physically divided into 4 tracts by the roads that run through it. A sub-division plan dated 7/15/97 indicates that there are 4 buildings rights on this farm, with one of them remaining with the original homestead, and 3 building lots of 1 to 1 1/2 acre each. There is also the possibility that the land could be divided into 1 building lot and 3 mini-farms of 20+ acres each.

Top Producers Choose Knight!

Congratulations to the La-Foster Farm

Terry and Gerald Foster are very proud of their record-breaking cow, Lucy, and rightly so. She produced 75,260 pounds of milk in her last lactation. They are also pleased with their Knight Reel Auggie® mixers, which, combined with the Foster's excellent management practices, have propelled the La-Foster herd average to the #1 milk production status in North Carolina. There is no comparison to the complete, palatable blend from a Knight Reel Auggie, with its patented reel and auger blending combination. Why else would the La-Foster Farm choose only Knight to feed their record-setting herd?

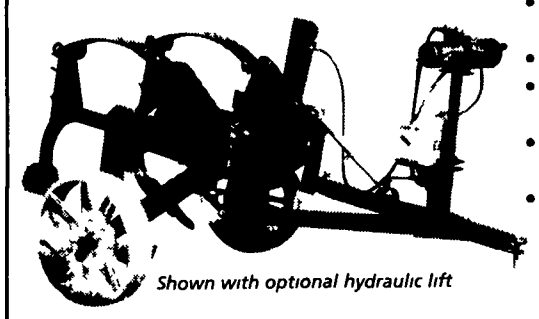
Increased Moisture Improves Crop Yields!

I&J Manufacturing Deep Till Slitter

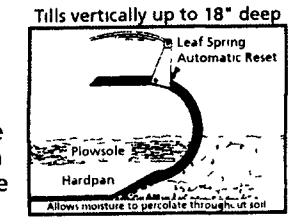
I&J Deep Till Slitter with Tebben automatic reset leaf spring till mechanisms:



Shown with optional hydraulic lift

- Available in 1 or 2 shank models
- Provides a 60" cut
- 12V hydraulic lift is optional
- 2 shank model weighs approx. 838 lbs.
- Available in 3pt or trailing models

Tills vertically up to 18" deep



With deep tilling, soil is tilled more on the vertical plane than the horizontal, leaving topsoil less disturbed. Commonly done in the fall to catch winter moisture & followed by a light disking in the spring to level the surface for uniform population.

Livermore Joins Blue Seal As Dairy Sales Rep.

LONDONDERRY, N.H. — David S. Livermore, Shippensburg, Pa., has recently joined Blue Seal as a dairy sales representative, serving customers out of Blue Seal's Hagerstown, Md. mill.

A graduate of Penn State University, Livermore served in a similar capacity with another major feed company before coming to Blue Seal.

Blue Seal Feeds, Inc. is headquartered in Londonderry, New Hampshire and is affiliated with Kent Feeds, Inc. in the Midwestern states and Evergreen Mill, Inc. in the southwest. Blue Seal manufacturers feed for horses, dairy cattle, livestock, poultry, pets, and wild birds.

Schmalz Tops NGSP Yield Contest

DES MOINES, Iowa — Richard D. Schmalz, Doylestown, Pa., was recognized recently as a 1999 National Grain Sorghum Producers (NGSP) Yield Contest winner. The award presentation was made earlier this year during the NGSP annual conference in Corpus Christi, Texas.

The 14th annual NGSP Yield Contest recognized 100 state winners and 15 national winners in six divisions: non-irrigated and irrigated conventional tillage, non-irrigated no-till, non-irrigated and irrigated mulch-till, and irrigated ridge-till.

As a nine-time NGSP yield contestant, Schmalz placed first in both the state no-till non-irrigated and mulch-till non-irrigated divisions. Pioneer® brand 8699 gave him the winning grain sorghum yield of 52.19 bushels per acre and 31.89 bushels per acre respectively.

"I selected Pioneer 8699 because I was informed that it was a good hybrid for growing conditions in our area," said Schmalz. He and his wife Carole raise corn, sorghum, and wheat.

Not all fields have the same production capacity, so management decisions including seed selection and irrigation play a large role in determining grain sorghum yield, said John Muenzenberger, sorghum product manager at Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. "We're pleased that our hybrids achieve winning yields. Pioneer is proud to recognize Richard and Carole as yield contest winners."

More information on Pioneer's winning lineup of sorghum hybrids and other Pioneer products is available from local providers of Pioneer brand products or by checking the Pioneer World Wide Web site: http://www.pioneer.com.

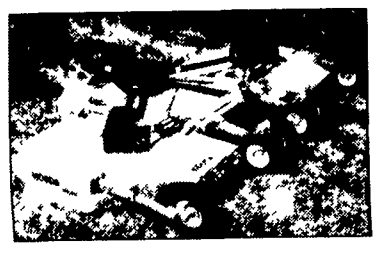
Flexible Wing Rotary Cutter Features Design Improvements For Less Downtime

ROCKFORD, Ill. — Woods Equipment Company has introduced the improved Batwing 3180 Series 3, a heavy-duty 15-foot flexible wing rotary cutter that offers exceptional cutting performance in contract mowing and agricultural applications.

Ideal for production agriculture, highway right-of-ways, and other municipal bid jobs, the 3180 Series 3 features the bottom side, heavy-gauge, high strength steel box frame construction that provides a strong deck structure, so the top of the deck is free of structural components.

"Because the top deck is smooth, it sheds water and debris," said Kirt Swanson, product manager of the Batwing line. "This prevents corrosion, and can add to the life of the machine."

The machine has several design features that enhance cutting efficiency and long life. These include a gearbox shield redesigned into one piece that flips up intact for easy maintenance. Deck protection plates have been added to prevent deck damage from a bent blade, and a Constant Velocity (C.V.) input driveline is upgraded to Category 6 Heavy, the highest in the industry. Also new for 2000 is a redesigned one-piece ductile iron spring-loaded wheel arm for increased durability.



The Batwing 3180 Series 3 flexible wing rotary cutter from Woods Equipment Company features a bottom side, heavy gauge, high strength steel box frame construction that provides a strong deck structure.

Other features of the Batwing 3180 Series 3 include a 180-inch cutting width and a blade tip speed of 16,000-feet per minute. "We designed the Series 3 with a blade tip speed that would ensure the highest quality cut from a rotary cutter," said Swanson. "For our customers, this means a near finish-quality cut, even in brush of up to three-inches in diameter."

The Batwing 3180 Series 3 features Woods' patented Intra-Drive gearbox, which eliminates the need for a splitter gearbox. This results in shorter wing drivelines and fewer moving parts for low maintenance and increased reliability. All Intra-Drive gearboxes feature heavy-duty 2⅛-inches diameter output shafts and double spindle shaft seals, and are backed by a 36-month warranty.

The 3180 Series 3 offers a 13-inch deep deck. This depth increases cut material capacity and reduces clogging. Also, the under-deck baffling controls material flow for excellent clippings distribution.

Skid-Steer Loaders Increase Operator Comfort

FARGO, N.D. — Bobcat Company announced the availability of an air-conditioning system for its enclosed-cab 863, 873, and 963 skid-steer loaders and 864 compact track loader.

This factory-installed air-conditioning option enhances operator comfort in hot climates without adding external components to the loader design.

Conveniently located on the upper left of the cab, the new Bobcat® air-conditioning control panel features a temperature control dial and three-speed fan dial, which can lower cab temperature up to 30 degrees Fahrenheit. With the panel's center rocker switch, an operator can easily turn the air-conditioning compressor on and off. For optimal operator comfort, four adjustable air vents direct the air according to operator preference.

Unlike other add-on air-conditioning units, the Bobcat air- conditioning panel does not affect loader cab height or operator visibility. Each component of the system is protected within the loader framer, ensuring operator comfort without sacrificing loader design.

The air-conditioning draws a maximum of 3.5 hp from the engine while removing a minimum of 17,000 BTUs per hour of heat from the cab. The unit uses 25 percent fresh air and 75 percent recirculated air.

The air-conditioning system joins the list of next-generation operator comfort features in Bobcat's recently introduced G-Series line, including the factory-installed heating option.

Willmar Eagle Sprayer Has Full-Authority Electronic Powertrain

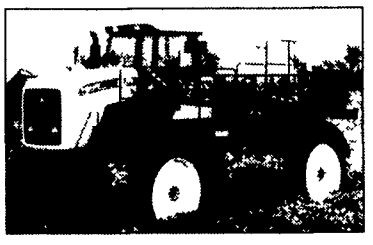
ATLANTA, Ga. — "The new 1200 gallon Willmar® Eagle® 8600 sprayer is the most powerful, response-automated, traction-controlled, and versatile Fieldstar Precision Agriculture System equipped applicator in the world today," said Daryl Patten, Willmar general marketing manager.

The Eagle 8600 sprayer is powered by a new Cummins® 280 hp Quantum System diesel engine, (optional 340 hp available), with full-authority electronic powertrain that controls the engine, transmission, traction, and spray pump to ensure accurate application in varying field and speed conditions.

As field conditions change, the Total Control System (TCS) electronic control module regulates the amount of hydraulic oil directed to the transmission and wheel motors to deliver constant traction. Working in concert with the TCS, the patented split axle, four-wheel independent AireGlide suspension smoothes out the bumps for real riding comfort.

The Eagle 8600 is Fieldstar Ready. When equipped with an AGCO Fieldstar Precision Agriculture system, including Differential Global Positioning System (DGPS), information recorded previously can be used with the Eagle 8600 to vary application rates and log information necessary for management decisions.

The Fieldstar system can also import data from any other precision agriculture system, giving custom applicators great versatility in working with farmers. The Fieldstar DGPS receiver is also lightbar compatible, extending operator field time and improving navigation accuracy.



New 1,200-gallon, 280-hp Willmar Eagle 8600 Sprayer features full-authority electronic powertrain control of engine, transmission, traction, and spray pump to ensure accurate application in varying field and speed conditions.

Power, Eye Appeal Mark KILE Angus Show Animals

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Although the heifers shown at the recent Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) at the Farm Show Complex proved to be a hard act to follow, quality bulls provided an equally impressive show.

"This is as good a lineup as we've ever seen," said Angus show judge Tim Fitzgerald of the heifer show. "This lineup is extremely stout and powerful in its makings. It could run with any competition in the country today."

Fitzgerald had the opportunity to view the classes from another side of the fence this year, as he has shown at KILE competition in past years. This year, however, marked the first year to judge the event.

A July heifer, "Champion Hill Georgina 1693 13464473," owned by Ed and Mandy Richardson, Louisa, Va., took home grand champion female honors. (S: Leachman Saugahatchee 3000D; D: LLA Georgi)

"This heifer is extremely well-made. She's deep in the forerib and flank, is sound on her feet and legs, and has a smooth front end," said Fitzgerald.

Reserve grand champion female went home with Clark Farm's, Hustontown, "SRS Lucy's Quality 8110 13568061."

According to Fitzgerald the quality was equally as good in the Angus bull show. "These bulls are sound, have extra bone, have the stoutness and power in the way they move. When you go home and turn them out they'll stay sound for the rest of their lives. There will be good breeding days ahead for these bulls. They've got balance and eye appeal," said Fitzgerald.

Grand champion bull went to Weaverland Valley Farms and Harry Bachman. "WVF HB Atlantic National Merit +13521388," (S: LF New Trend 4100; D: LLA Georgina 419) took top placing as a bull that is "Not only sound and thick, but he's got a great top and hip. He stand stout with the smoothness and length of body," said Fitzgerald.

Reserve grand champion bull, 2-year-old "Meadow Mist 033 30811 13005070," was owned by by Burleigh Anderson and JDH Cattle Company, Dover. "He's powerful, thick-ended, with a long body, and he'll stay sound," said Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald is the manager of Fox Cross Angus Ranch in Alderson, W. Va. Fitzgerald attended Oklahoma State University and has a bachelor's degree in animal science and business.

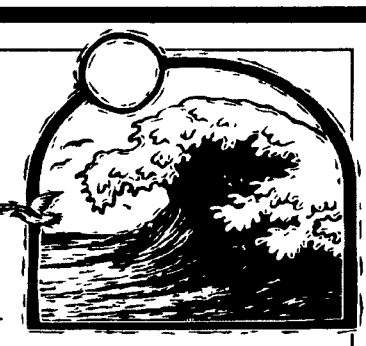
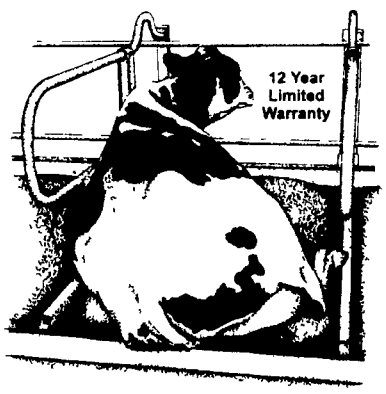
Waterbeds for Cows





ALANTA™ LimPoly

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE

The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 12-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE

SAFE

Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

BEEF TIPS

Why Simmental cattle for club calves? (Part II)

Simmental beef cattle come in various colors: all black; black with white blazes or socks; all red; red with white blazes and socks; red and white; and straw.

Young people like to have something different, an animal that is easy to identify and is different from other cattle.

First-Time Five-Acre Corn Contest Entry Yields Top Spot

High yields of 218.3 bushels of dry shell corn per acre earned Robert More, Montgomery, a first-place spot in the 1999 Five-Acre Corn contest and second in the National Corn Grower's Association contest for Pennsylvania.

MONTGOMERY (Lycoming Co.) — For many farmers, the 1999 corn crop yields spelled disaster, but for the corn crop planted by Robert More, Montgomery, the rains came at critical times, giving him an excellent crop.

In fact, More's yields were almost twice as high as others' corn yields in surrounding areas.

His high yields of 218.3 bushels of dry shell corn per acre earned him a first-place spot in the 1999 Five-Acre Corn contest and second in the National Corn Grower's Association (NCGA) contest for Pennsylvania.

> 'The farmer wants to farm, but also he wants to receive a return on his investment. He's not received that for a number of years. When I look forward, I don't see anything different happening. I have a daughter and a son, and I don't see them being involved in this business.'

> Robert More

"When you're talking about rain showers, one area can get just a trace and another area can get a half of an inch," said More. "That half an inch at the most critical time can make considerable bushels of corn difference."

Although More has been farming for 35 years, this is the first time he entered the contest.

Currently he has slightly more than 300 acres in production, growing two-thirds corn and one-third soybeans.

"When I graduated from high school in the early 60s, my father and I worked together," More said. "At that time, we just farmed the home farm, which was about 90 acres."

NOT TOO LATE TO PLANT RYE COVER CROP

Mark Goodson
CCA Extension Agent
York County

I adapted the following article from "Managing Cover Crops Profitably," second edition, 1998, Sustainable Agriculture Network, Beltsville, Md.

Rye, the cool season annual cereal grain, is inexpensive and easy to establish. It is the hardiest of the cereal grains and can be planted later in the fall than other cover crops.

Benefits growers can count on from planting rye include:

- Considerable dry matter production
- An extensive soil-holding root system
- Significant reduction of nitrate leaching
- Exceptional weed suppression
- A moisture-holding snow trap over winter.

Management Strategies Essential When Planting Rootworm-, Corn Borer-Resistant Varieties

ANDY ANDREWS

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — New transgenic corn varieties with rootworm control are available to growers on a limited basis now, and will continue to grow.

But just like varieties with the Bt gene to control European corn borer (ECB), some kind of resistance management will also have to be in place, according to a crop entomology specialist.

Dennis Calvin, Penn State entomologist, spoke about evolving strategies to deal with the new transgenic corn, some with "stackable" genes that have traits to fight corn rootworm (CRW) and ECB.

Calvin spoke to about 70 crop consultants and agriproduct representatives in mid-July during the Penn State-sponsored Field Crop Pest Management Field Day at the Landisville Research Center.

About 1 percent of the corn in the U.S. planted this year had CRW control characteristics, noted Calvin. For 2001, that number is certain to grow.

Those strategies for dealing with insect resistance — preventing the CRW from becoming resistance to the effects of the toxins — are still evolving.

Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations insist that 20 percent of the corn acres should be non-Bt corn to act as a refuge to deter resistance.

If spraying, the number jumps up to 40 percent. So other integrated strategies must be incorporated in fields.

Some growers plant Bt and non-Bt corn in strips. An example would be two rows of non-Bt along with 12 rows of Bt.

Another strategy — a popular one — is to plant blocks of corn, where 80 percent is Bt and another 20 percent aren't.

Another option, adopted by some growers, is to plant different fields — one containing Bt and another with non-Bt corn.

But with the CRW varieties, growers should understand the rootworm's life cycle is different from the corn borer. The rootworm doesn't move as far — it won't move from field to field. Mating is close by.

So growers may have to take CRW and non-CRW controlling varieties and somehow mix them together, according to Calvin.

"What is the best strategy?" said Calvin, regarding finding economic thresholds. He believes it's essential for researchers to see what is in the marketplace first and then determine what to do.

"It's going to be an issue we'll have to contend with, and we have to generate data to deal with it," he said.

For now, growers selecting ECB resistance through Bt corn should consider an overall strategy when dealing with pests.

Growers should select not just ECB-resistant corn varieties, but look closely at yield and other characteristics.

"Look for (a variety) that performs well, not just one that has the genes in it," said Calvin.

Deciding whether the technology is a benefit depends on the cost factors. Getting the genes will cost a premium.

And some hybrids can outyield Bt and those with stacked genes — combining CRW and ECB control — so it is best to consider planting and yield intentions.

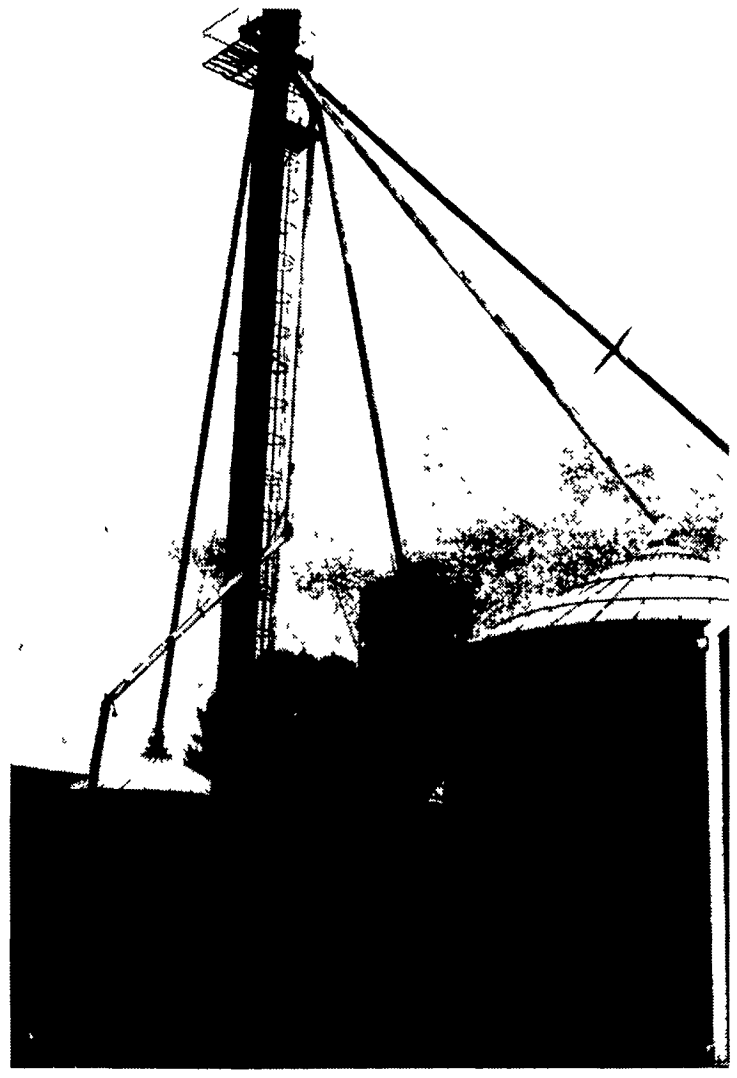
The Freedom to Farm Act of 1996 gave More the opportunity to break out of continuous corn and diversify into soybean production.



Storage for 40,000 bushels of corn is located on the More farm.

First-Time Five-Acre Corn

The original property was purchased by More's grandfather in 1923. More's father added to the property in 1949 and, today, More rents additional acres. He also purchased another farm in the Hughesville area. Since his farm is located in an area that is zoned heavy industrial, the Clean and Green program is vital to keeping his farm in production.

"If it weren't for the Clean and Green Program to get preferential treatment with the taxes, we could not farm, not in today's farming market with the very small margins we have now," More said.

Prior to 1996, More grew continuous corn on his acreage, giving him a 100 percent corn More grew continuous corn on his acreage, giving him a 100 percent corn production base. When the Freedom to Farm act was passed, More grabbed his chance to add soybeans to his list of crops, allowing him to plan a crop rotation.

"That helps break up the insect resistance and the weed resistance cycle," said More.

More's choice of hybrids come from Pioneer and he favors the genetically altered varieties. This year he has planted both Bt corn and Roundup Ready corn and uses Roundup Ready Soybeans.

"I used a very small amount of Roundup Ready corn because of a weed problem. That was the easiest way to take it out," he said.

and poorly prepared land, rye out performs all other cover crops.

Benefits

• Nutrients. Rye is the best cool season cereal for absorbing soil nitrogen. Its fast-growing, fibrous root system can take up and hold as much as 100-pounds per acre, but typically 25 to 50-pounds of nitrogen until spring. Rye increases the concentration of exchangeable potassium near the surface of the soil by bringing it up from lower in the soil profile.

• Soil stability. Along with conservation tillage practices, rye provides soil protection on sloping fields and holds soil loss to a tolerable level.

• Versatile. In our region, rye can serve as an over wintering cover crop after corn, before or after soybeans, fruits or vegetables. It is not the best choice before a small grain crop, such as wheat or barley, unless you can kill the rye reliably and completely, because volunteer rye seed would lower the value of other grains.

• Organic matter. Rye provides up to 10,000-pounds of dry matter per acre with 3,000 to 4,000-pounds typical in the Northeast.

• Weed suppressor. In cool seasons, rye is one of the best for out competing weeds, especially small seeded, light-sensitive annuals such as lambsquarters, redroot pigweed, velvetleaf, chickweed, and foxtail. Rye also suppresses many weeds allelopathically (as a natural herbicide), including dandelions and Canada thistle.

• Pest suppressor. Rye reduces insect pest problems in rotations and attracts significant numbers of beneficials such as lady bugs.

Establishment

Drill one to two bushels per acre no deeper than two-inches deep or broadcast one and one-half to three bushels and lightly disk or cultipack. Very late seeding rates can be up to six bushels per acre to assure an adequate stand.

Killing And Controlling

Rye grows and matures quickly in the spring. Temperature and moisture determine maturity rate. Once rye is tall and stemmy, rye ties up nitrogen while it decomposes. The nitrogen tie-up varies directly with the maturity of the rye. Killing rye early, while it's still succulent (the preboot to early-boot stage), is a way to minimize nitrogen tie-up. Killing the rye earlier, rather than later, will help reduce chance that spring rains delay killing past the preboot to boot stage.

Tilling under rye at 12-inches to 18-inches usually eliminates regrowth and nitrogen tie-up. Two to three pints of a properly mixed and applied glyphosate herbicide should kill the crop. In the southern region of the Pennsylvania, this is usually in late March.

Corps' Decision To Cost Farmers, Business Millions

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) is outraged by the recent announcement that the Army Corps of Engineers will delay a benchmark study on $1 billion in improvements on the upper Mississippi rivers.

"We are not disappointed, we are livid," said Paul Bertels, NCGA's director of production and marketing.

Every farmer out there should be equally as irate, according to NCGA. Farmers should be telling their congressional representatives that the Corps' Navigation study should continue without delay.

"The Corps has spent $54 million on this study, and what do we have to show for it? Absolutely nothing. In actuality, this will not be a one-year delay, but will result in several years of delay. The Corps should release the information they have gathered for public debate and comment."

NCGA is seeking improvements on the Upper Mississippi and Illinois rivers — namely doubling the 600-foot lock chambers at Mississippi River Lock and Dam 25, 24, 22, 20 and 21, and at the La-Grange and Peoria locks on the Illinois River. For the past seven years, NCGA has watched the Corps of Engineers conduct the $54 million upper Mississippi-Illinois Water Navigation Study and has attempted to be fully engaged in the study process every step of the way, noted Bertels.

"However, the Corps is obviously not making the concerns of farmers a top priority," he continued. "There can be no delay in upgrading the aging and deteriorating U.S. river infrastructure. These delays cost U.S. farmers and business an average of $94 million per year. Without continued investments in the transportation infrastructure, U.S. farmers are being placed at a severe disadvantage as foreign countries increase their commitment to developing their agricultural export markets."

The lock and dam structures on the upper Mississippi and Illinois rivers are more than 50 years old and are unable to handle the current volume of barge traffic on the river. Subsequently, the resulting delays of three to four hours at each facility costs approximately $900 per barge.

"The Corps should release the current report for public review, and second, the administration has dictated that portions of the study must be revised, then the Corps must revisit each point of contention," Bertels said.

ALS-Resistant Pigweed Confirmed In Pa.

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

Bill Curran
Penn State
Weed Specialist

Lamar Witmar and Wes Martin of Brubaker Agronomic Consulting spoke with us about a pigweed control failure in soybean that one of their clients had experienced.

Although the specifics are still a bit vague, the grower had applied Pursuit herbicide POST in soybean in 1998, which failed to control the pigweed. The grower then followed this up with Classic and perhaps some Pinnacle that same season which still did not kill the weeds.

We heard about the failure that fall and were able to obtain some seeds from the uncontrolled pigweed. We tested the seed in greenhouse experiments and confirmed that it was redroot pigweed and resistant to a number of ALS-type herbicides. In fact, the pigweed was resistant to the six ALS herbicides tested belonging to the imidazolinone, sulfonylurea, and sulfonamide herbicide families (Table 1).

The treated pigweed varied in response to ALS herbicides. The triazine herbicide atrazine was the only herbicide to kill the pigweed in the greenhouse test, while Raptor and Pursuit slowed it down (50 to 69 percent control) and Beacon showed almost no activity (Table 1). We have obtained additional pigweed seed from these sites to do further greenhouse studies and will continue to monitor the situation in the future.

The farm in question is in Lancaster County and has raised corn, soybean, wheat, and forages and several different types of animals, including chickens. The pigweed problem was relatively new on the farm and is a particular problem in a field directly behind the animal containment buildings.

Although we still haven't determined the cause, the grower did explain that he had used Pursuit before in soybean and had used other ALS-type herbicides in corn such as Exceed. It appears that this grower may have used ALS-type herbicides for about five years in a row in this field. In addition, while visiting the ALS-resistant pigweed farm, I also inspected a field that was eight to 10 miles away on a different farm that had a redroot pigweed control failure this year (2000).

It was a soybean field that had received an ALS herbicide program for STS soybean that hadn't worked. The grower apparently resprayed it with another ALS herbicide program that still didn't kill the pigweed. Could this be number two?

The real question, "did four to five years of back-to-back ALS herbicide use select for resistant weed populations in a corn-soybean-small grain rotation? Or did the grower bring the resistant pigweed onto the farm in purchased feed, forage, or seed? The grower did admit to frequently spreading livestock manure in the problem field, which was adjacent to the animal confinement area. Could the ALS-resistant pigweed be related to feed and manure?

As a side note, I purchased some pigweed seed from a Mississippi (MS) supplier last spring for a research experiment. We were using the seed in a small weed control experiment at Rocksprings. We happened to have an ALS herbicide treatment in this small experiment, which failed to control the MS pigweed. I observed both dead and alive pigweed in the experiment. The healthy pigweed were almost definitely ALS-resistant. This certainly suggests that ALS-resistant weeds are common enough in some areas of the country that we easily could import them into our area.

Although we still don't know exactly what happened at the Lancaster County farm, the take-home message: ALS-resistant pigweed (and maybe other weeds) will likely become more commonplace in the future in Pennsylvania, especially in corn. If we were not using ALS herbicides, they would not be potential problems.

With Roundup Ready soybean, the importance of ALS resistance is probably less important than it was five years ago. However, it is important to remember that no herbicide is completely resistant to failure from resistance, tolerance, and weed shifts.

So, the bottom line — rotate potential problem herbicide modes of action annually and pay attention to where you purchase forages and feed to insure that resistant weeds are not the norm.

First-Time Five-Acre Corn

More is always ready to try new things, and has worked closely with the Penn State Cooperative Extension service in the past. This year he cosponsored a crop field day at his farm and a neighbor's farm. He is also always searching for new hybrids that meet his needs.

"Each year we have certain varieties that we test. They may be new varieties that are coming on the market or they may be some varieties that I've had in the past that may be very good yielders but may have some other traits that I didn't like very much. We still give them another chance," he said.

When the six to 12 varieties that he tests are harvested, More carefully determines yields by weighing the corn.

"It's very hard to eyeball it," he said. "If you're talking yields of close to 200 bushels per acre, and you miss it by 20 percent, that's 40 bushels."

He also looks for good standability, stalk strength, and depth of root system.

All of More's crop is custom harvested. After drying and storing the grain, More has it custom hauled to the buyer. The hauling expense might soon be a memory for More, however, because less than a mile up the road, a new mill is under construction.

"Normally when you get the grain hauled, it's like 15 cents per bushel," noted More. "Now that it's right next door to me, I'll do the hauling and it will give me a savings of about $6,000 in a year."

More has again entered the Five-Acre Corn contest for the 2000 crop year and has also signed up for the soybean contest. Plentiful rain this year proved to be a double-edged sword for farmers in some areas. A wet spring caused late planting and more disease throughout the season. Low summer temperatures also proved to be a challenge.

"Because of the wet conditions, I started to plant this year on April 29. Usually I start around April 20," said More.

The wet weather also caused an increase in some plant diseases such as rust, blight, and gray leaf, but proved beneficial in the long run.

"I don't remember ever seeing a crop year when my corn didn't suffer some stress from lack of moisture," he said.

More also struggles to keep predators out of his crops. Deer damage in his soybeans is high and he has experienced a lot of corn crop damage from wild geese.

"The worst thing with the geese is that they're regulated by the federal government. Normally if you have a problem with a state animal, it's no problem. The game commission works with you to remedy the problem. This is an altogether different situation. You have to go through a lot of different regulations to try to get a permit to take out so many birds. Just because you apply for a permit and spend $25 for a permit doesn't mean they're going to give you a permit," he said.

In spite of weather conditions, disease and animal damage, corn yields this year are expected to be high throughout the state and nation.

"The county as a whole will be above average, the state will be above average and the nation, as far as the USDA is projecting so far, is going to be one of the largest crops that was ever produced. When that happens, our prices in this area are dictated by what happens in the corn growing belt out west. As it stands now, prices have been very soft in the past few months. We're at some 10-year lows on some prices," explained More.

Like other commodities, bountiful crops mean that it will be harder to make a profit farming. Add to that the higher fuel prices and times get tougher.

More calculated that diesel fuel in March of 1999 was $.56 per gallon. Today it's $1.29 per gallon or 135 percent higher. LP gas is 50 percent higher than last season.

"Because of the low prices from the last two seasons and most likely this season, a farmer must have top management skills to keep the books in the black," said More.

More credits the government for helping farmers survive the rough times.

"If the government wasn't involved, I don't think you can keep the books in the black," he said, alluding to the many programs that are available for today's farmers.

As far he can see, it will be unlikely that another generation of Mores will crop farm and continue the family tradition.

"The farmer wants to farm, but also he wants to receive a return on his investment. He's not received that for a number of years. When I look forward, I don't see anything different happening. I have a daughter and a son, and I don't see them being involved in this business," said More.

More also operates a home heating business in which he spends a great deal of time, balancing two self-employed operations.

Also, to help protect his farming investment, More belongs to a local grain marketing group, The Central Susquehanna Grain Marketing Club, which meets and trades options. They also share information about the price of inputs and other things to improve production efficiencies.

"We're comprised of about five counties," noted More.

He also is a member of the Farm Bureau, the NCGA, and different associations that are trying to develop other uses for grain.

Corn Silage Quality: What Can You Expect This Year?

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — What will the quality of this year's corn silage crop be?

In recent years, advances in forage analysis and ration-balancing programs have generated additional information as to how forages are utilized by the cow. The availability of this information has generated increased interest in the correlation between weather patterns and forage quality.

What will the quality of this year's crop be?

Several specialists have offered a number of theories based on their observations from years with similar weather patterns with 1996 being the most recent. Corn silage harvested in that year did not ferment very rapidly or efficiently. Many dairy producers and their nutritional advisers complained that cows did not increase production until late December or January when fed corn silage produced in 1996.

Examination of information provided by Dr. Greg Roth, corn specialist with Penn State University, and Kurt Ruppel, dairy specialist for Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., may provide some insight as to the quality of this year's corn silage.

As most of the Northeast has received an abundance of rainfall, corn silage quality will most likely be less than optimal. Tall plants can result in lower grain-to-stalk ratio, unless the plants have multiple ears.

Research at the Miner Institute in New York has illustrated that lignin levels in corn plants increases in wet weather, thus decreasing fiber and whole plant digestibility.

Data from other institutions and from field observations supports the Miner Institute observations. One solution may be to chop silage with the head set higher than normal. Research at Pioneer, Penn State, and other universities has illustrated that chopping silage higher than usual (12 to 18-inches) decreases NDF levels and increases whole plant digestibility. However, this practice reduces total yield and actually results in less milk per acre.

Results of a Penn State study indicate a one-ton loss in dry matter yield, but a 1.5-point decrease in the NDF content of corn silage with a 12-inch change in cutting height. Similar results from Pioneer indicate an increase of 72 pounds of milk per ton of silage, but a loss of 258-pounds of milk per acre. If forage supplies are abundant this year, and they should be, the reduction in yield may be less of a negative factor.

Before accepting a blanket recommendation to high chop corn silage, examine the whole farm effects of your decision. Evaluate the decision based on total forage supply and quality. Improving the quality of corn silage may be desirable, as much of the hay crops are already of lower quality. Improving overall forage quality is especially important for high-producing herds.

Be sure to consider the long-term ramifications on milk components and milk pricing. Dr. Satter at the U.S. Dairy Forage Research Center in Wisconsin evaluated harvest height of "well-matured" corn silage. The comparison was made between a stubble height of 13-inches versus 27 inches. The dry matters were rather high at 36 and 43 percent, respectively. The neutral detergent fiber on the 27-inch stubble was 34 percent on a dry-matter basis. The butterfat averaged 3.39 percent on the high-chopped corn compared to 3.74 percent on the 13-inch stubble.

Another issue that may present a problem is plant drydown. Observations of a number of fields have indicated that kernel maturity may be occurring at a faster rate than whole plant drydown.

There is considerable variation in the relationship between whole-plant moisture and the position of kernel milkline. Differences in hybrids, their drydown characteristics, and the growing conditions contribute to this variation.

Use kernel milkline as an indicator of when to start checking whole-plant moisture. It is time to measure the corn's moisture content when kernel denting begins and the milkline becomes visible.

To check moisture, hand-harvest a few dozen-corn plants within a field. Reduce the plant particle size, i.e. bedding chopper, to adequately dry the sample using a Koster tester or a microwave oven. When using these drying devices, obtain a stable endpoint weight before calculating the same dry matter percent. This will avoid overestimating the dry matter content.

Base corn silage harvest on a whole-plant moisture of 65-70 percent. This will vary somewhat, depending on the storage structure and the amount of corn silage ensiled. Monitoring whole plant moisture will be critical to timing corn silage harvest. If kernel moisture levels are lower than normal, it will be beneficial to harvest the crop with a machine equipped with a kernel processor.

If this year's crop is similar to the crop in 1996, there are several other recommendations you should consider. Treating the silage with a preservative will help fermentation efficiency. The preservative should contain both bacteria and enzymes, as the enzymes will enhance the fermentation process by improving the availability of nutrients needed by the bacteria.

Be sure to incorporate sound harvesting and silo filling practices this year to limit oxygen and enhance silage fermentation. When filling trenches, use the progressive wedge system. Be sure to use a tractor that is of adequate size and weight, considering the rate at which silage is being delivered to the trench.

Adding sugar to the ration may pay off. That assumes that the corn plant does not contain the usual sugar levels or the corn is lower in overall digestibility. Many liquid and dry sugar products are available that may be cost effective. Forage analysis will be important for determining nutrient content. However, forage analyses on corn silage grown under wet conditions are often overvalued. The silage is not as good as the forage analysis, making it difficult to accurately balance rations. Work with a nutritional consultant to deal with these potential issues.

Each growing season presents a new set of challenges. As additional information is gathered in the future, it may be possible to accurately predict the quality of forage that producers must deal with. Until then we must rely on the research available and years of field observations to adjust our management practices to insure we have top quality forage to feed our high producing cows.

Producers have access to new technologies, kernel processors and new hybrids, that can help deal with environmental conditions. However, they do not guarantee a particular outcome on a consistent basis. Good basic silage making practices are still the key for quality silage production.

better in farming, More believes there has to be a greater usage of the crop, calling for more ethanol production and more grain exports.

"My outlook right now is, if the farmer isn't holding the government's hand, he'll be dead. It's kind of a big picture, at least it is to me," More said.

"The Freedom to Farm Act ran from 1996 to 2002, and I know they're trying to think right now about a new program," he said.

More hopes the flexibility is there so the farmer doesn't have his hands tied and is allowed freedom to farm.

PMCGA, Seed Industry Want Your Membership

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Consider joining NCGA and PMCGA today to be part of a national effort to promote corn and corn producer-related issues.

With our Membership Incentive Program (MIP), corn producers who grow five or more acres of corn can now join both organizations with little real cost.

The MIP program works like this:

If you sign up for a three-year joint membership for $75, you can receive a free bag of seed from one of our participating industry partners listed on the form. To get signed up, complete your membership form and send it in to our office at the address listed on the form along with a check for $75 made payable to PMCGA to cover the three-year membership.

Our office will then send your name to the seed company you have selected and a coupon to you indicating you have qualified for the program. You will then be contacted by one of the seed company reps and your seed will be delivered before the planting season.

This is a win-win-win proposition — you get a bag of seed and membership in a large national organization for $75, NCGA and PMCGA get your support, and the seed industry gets to showcase new genetics to key producers.

As a member of NCGA, you will be part of a 30,000-member national organization that is addressing many of the issues we face in the industry. Current issues include corn prices, industry consolidation, environmental issues, and development of new markets for corn.

NCGA also sponsors the National Corn Yield Contest and Commodity Classic. They also send a quarterly newsletter to all members, entitled the National Corn Grower. PMCGA sponsors one or two conferences a year, the Five-Acre Corn Club, Corn Talk, and helps to promote corn issues to the public at many local events.

If you are a corn producer who grows at least five acres of corn, consider joining for three years today and taking advantage of the MIP program. Use the MIP program to look at some new hybrids that some of our seed company partners have available this year. Remember, membership in the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) automatically makes you a member in the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

Optimum Corn Management Practices For Drought-Prone Soils In Southern Pennsylvania

Project Leader:
Dr. Greg Roth
Department of Agronomy
University Park

Drought risk is a major issue for corn producers in southern Pennsylvania. Growers often choose lower plant populations as one method of reducing the impact of drought on corn yield.

The overall objective of these two studies is to evaluate hybrids, plant populations, and starter fertilizers under drought prone growing conditions. This study forms one component of the Mid-Atlantic Regional Interdisciplinary Cropping Systems Project.

Six commercial hybrids were grown at populations ranging from 20,000 to 32,000 plants per acre at two sites in southeastern Pennsylvania. Both sites were strongly influenced by drought in 1999, with average yields of 96 and 65 bushels per acre. In contrast to the previous year, yields generally declined as plant populations increased.

It appears that when drought reduces yield potential below 100 bushels per acre, optimum plant population decreases from 30 to 20,000 plants per acre.

The six hybrids were also planted with and without a starter fertilizer (10-20-20 applied at 140-pounds per acre). All six hybrids responded to the starter with increased height and dry matter at V6 (leaf stage), but there were no significant responses at harvest in terms of grain yield, moisture, or lodging. The three hybrids that responded to starter in the previous year also had slight yield responses in 1999.

In a third study, seven different starter fertilizer treatments were compared, varying in amount and source of N (nitrogen) and amount of P (phosphorous) and K (potassium). These were evaluated in field-length plots in two counties. The Lebanon county site had no significant responses to starter treatments owing to drought (average yield was 105-bushels per acre. The Centre county site had yield reductions from several starters containing P and sulfur (S), but not from starters containing N only (50-0-0) or N-P-K (10-30-10).

A combination of high soil test levels, a warm spring, ample growing degree days, and limited yields because of drought-reduced responses to the starter fertilizers. These studies are continuing.

Breakthroughs Will Boost Research Into Corn's Genetic Makeup

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Recent announcements regarding significant breakthroughs in human and rice genomics provide a major boost for corn genome research, the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) noted.

Since 1996, funding plant genomic research — a process that determines the genetic makeup of the plant, in this case corn — has been the number one appropriations priority for the NCGA. It is hoped that this checkoff-funded program will open the doors for the development of improved corn hybrids that are more nutritious, provide greater yields, and are more adaptable to seasons, climates, and soils.

Monsanto announced a major scientific breakthrough in decoding the genetic makeup of rice that according to Monsanto "will provide a new level of understanding of almost all the genes in rice." Similarly, Celera Genomics of Rockville, Md., announced that it has completed the sequencing phase of a human's genome. Both of these breakthroughs involve a "shotgun" or shortcut sequencing technique that identifies nearly all of the genes in rice and human organisms.

"The human genome breakthrough will prove validity of the shotgun approach to sequencing, particularly the validity as it applies to very complex organisms such as humans. Corn is estimated to be as complex," said Floyd Schultz, a grower from Plainfield, Ill. and chairman of the NCGA Customer and Business Development Action Team. "Things that we can learn from humans will help us advance significantly in corn."

Schultz noted that every advancement that has occurred to date in human genome research has been applied to the plant level with some success, through the Plant Genome Initiative.

"The human effort has significantly driven the plant effort, and plant research has helped to drive the human effort," he noted.

The rice breakthrough is also significant in boosting corn genomic research, Schultz said.

"Similar to corn, rice is a grass, so we're much closer to applicability to corn," he said. "Rice is certainly not as complicated as corn, but with the working draft now available, it's going to jumpstart a major project under the Plant Genome Initiative that involves locating significant genes in rice and using them to locate key corn genes. This comparative genomics will be quite significant."

All of these advances will allow researchers to continue to make strides in genomic research involving all economical crops, such as corn.

In recent testimony to the U.S. House Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies on Appropriations, Boyd Smith of York, Neb., outlined the importance of plant genomics.

"We strongly urge you to provide not less than $80 million for the National Science Foundation (NSF) Plant Genome Initiative (PGI) and $25.5 million for the '2010 Project,' the functional genomics project for Arabidopsis thaliana," Smith said.

Smith noted that a vigorous plant genomics program will allow researchers to create new hybrids and varieties that will:

- Improve human and animal health.
- Reduce medical costs because of more nutritious, healthier food for individuals.
- Reduce worldwide malnutrition through higher yielding and more nutritious crops.
- Reduce environmental problems for crop and livestock producers.
- Expand plant-based renewable resources for raw materials, industrial feedstocks, chemicals and energy.
- Enable growers to get more income from the market, thereby reducing reliance on federal farm programs.

Referencing the breakthroughs in genomic research, Smith noted that another key factor in the recent announcements is ensured accessibility to fundamental genetic information.

"Our interest from the beginning has been to try to ensure accessibility to the basic genetic information. We were concerned early on that interests in other countries would lock up genetic information and preclude work in corn because of the similarity between plants," he said. "The great thing about the rice announcement is that it puts all of the fundamental knowledge about rice in the public domain."

Grains Council, National Corn Growers Association Respond To Corn Concerns In Japan

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Responding to the possible erosion of the U.S. corn export market in Japan, the U.S. Grains Council (USGC) and the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) quickly launched a mission on Sept. 24 to address the concerns of the largest single customer of U.S. corn.

"A tough, new law goes into effect in Japan on April 1, 2001, that sets a zero tolerance for the import of unapproved agricultural products," explained Ken Hobbie, president and CEO of the USGC, and the senior member of the U.S. team. "Under the new law, importers can face severe fines and prison terms for importing unapproved varieties of corn into Japan.

"The StarLink taco shell incident sent a shock through the Japanese corn import industry and raised concern about U.S. ability to comply with the new law."

StarLink is currently not approved in Japan, and is also the only commercially produced variety of U.S. corn that is not yet approved there. Approval in Japan, while independent of approval in the United States, has been held up pending further data from the life science company. Under the new law, importers can face severe fines and prison terms for importing unapproved hybrids of corn into Japan.

The taco shell incident to which Hobbie referred was the announcement on Sept. 23 that StarLink hybrids, containing a type of Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) bacterium that controls European corn borer, was reportedly found in Kraft Taco Bell taco shells in grocery stores. StarLink hybrids are the only Bt hybrids not yet approved in Japan. Approval in Japan, while independent of approval in the U.S. has been awaiting food use approval in the U.S. Kraft voluntarily recalled the taco shells and Aventis, maker of StarLink Bt, has withdrawn the hybrids from the market, pending final approval.

A high-level government/industry tag team representing U.S. corn growers responded to the Japanese concerns. In addition to Hobbie, the mission included Rick Tolman, executive vice president and CEO of NCGA; Isi Siddiqui, special assistant for trade to U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman; and Bernice Slutsky, science adviser in the USDA's Foreign Ag Service.

"The Japanese received us warmly because our presence demonstrated a swift and aggressive response to their concerns," said Tolman. "We didn't have all of the answers, but we provided enough information and specifics on how we are responding to the problem to help restore confidence in our ability to meet the pending market realities. Also, it reaffirmed our strong commitment to Japan."

The U.S. representative spent two days in intense meetings with Japanese government and industry officials detailing plans to channel StarLink into approved markets in the U.S. and keep it out of shipments to Japan. Discussions also focused on ways to avoid similar incidents.

The team met with the Japan Ministry of Health and Welfare (MHW); Zennoh (the largest co-op in Japan and single largest grain importer); Japan Ministry of Agriculture Forestry and Fisheries (MAFF); Japan Starch and Sweetner Industry; Japan Oilseed Processors Industry (corn oil); Japan Brewery Association; Japan Corn Foods Association; Japan Feed Trade Association; Japan Feed Manufacturers Association; and the local trade press.

"We were able to speak with nearly all, if not all, of the key groups that either regulate corn imports or import and use corn," said Hobbie. "Our meeting were valuable in restoring confidence in the U.S. corn supply. However, we will still need to continue to pay very close attention to the needs of our Japanese customers."

Scott Harkcom Is New Manager Of Agronomy Research Farm

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When Lynn Hoffman announced his retirement in 1999 as manager of the agronomy research farm, Steve Fales, department head, said "I was praying this wouldn't happen on my watch."

Now it seems that the department has a worthy successor to manage the farm.

Scott Harkcom worked for seven years as assistant manager of the farm under Hoffman. "With all his experience over the years, Lynn always had an answer," said Harkcom. "I have to rely on a lot more people for answers now that Lynn's not around."

In his role as manager, Harkcom supervises three full-time employees and several hourly employees. Together, the team oversees the operation of the 600-acre farm, about one-third of which is used for small plot research. The remainder is used for production agriculture and precision agriculture research.

Asked about the differences between managing a farm for research rather than for production agriculture, Harkcom said that a research farm requires more time for field preparation because more tasks must be done with smaller, specialized equipment. He and his crew spend a fair amount of time modifying equipment for use in research.

Harkcom sees three major research paths in the farm's future: exploration of new technologies related to precision agriculture, evaluation of biotechnologically altered crops in comparison to traditional varieties, and continued exploration of tillage methods. Performance tests of new varieties will continue because this is one of the most direct ways the department's research helps Pennsylvania farmers. Harkcom expects that research on the farm will become more integrated between the college's various departments as interdisciplinary cooperation grows.

Harkcom is part of a department-wide effort to increase opportunities for public education at the farm. "Our primary goal on the farm is to educate the public, and when we get a good crowd of people here and it seems like they're really interested, that's very gratifying. We can do all the research in the world here, but if we don't get that information to the public, it's not doing anybody any good. So I look forward to the opportunity to interact more with the public.

A committee is exploring the idea of a field day in the fall at which the public could come and learn, for instance, what goes into growing and harvesting a corn crop, how herbicides affect crop yield, and how different methods of tillage affect the population of microorganisms living in the soil.

When Hoffman retired, the department decided to assign his research responsibilities to a new full-time faculty member. Sjoerd Duiker, assistant professor of soil management and applied soil physics, is taking over Hoffman's long-term research on tillage and crop rotation at the farm and also developed his own research program.

Harkcom believes that Hoffman's research into no-till crop production has made the most impact of any research done in the department over the last few decades, because it drastically changed the way many farmers manage their lands, not only in Pennsylvania, but also in nearby states.

Harkcom has a master's degree in agronomy from Penn State. His prior work experience includes crop scout, extension agent, and forage variety testing. "I enjoy my job because I love working outside and I hope that some of the research I'm involved with helps to provide answers to farmers' problems."

Harkcom can be reached at wsh1@psu.edu or (814) 692-7955.

FULLTIME forage

Want to increase your cows' milk production and give them a healthier diet without taking a huge bite out of your wallet? We've found a way, with Cargill FullTime Forage. The key? Higher cell-wall digestibility and crude protein levels for your cows, great prices for you!

Milk it for all it's worth! You want to get the most out of your business. Consider this: Research shows that for cows, a high forage diet is healthier than a high grain diet and can lead to significant increases in milk production. More milk means more money in the bank.

A range of studies has shown the dramatic increase in milk production with Cargill FullTime forage. In one study conducted at Michigan State University, cows fed FullTime forage as part of a high forage ration, on average, consumed 6% more dry matter, resulting in 7.2 more pounds of milk per cow per day.

With FullTime forage you get high fiber digestibility, low lignin, improved dry matter intake and better cow performance from a rumen-friendly diet.

FULLTIME forage

Another major study has confirmed it. You can see increased milk production with Cargill FullTime Forage. In a 1999 USDA study in Beltsville Maryland, cows whose diet included Cargill FullTime Forage (vs normal corn silage) consumed 11% more dry matter and increased milk production by 6.9 pounds per cow per day. This agrees with a Michigan State University study which demonstrated at 6% increase in dry matter intake, an increase of 7.2 more pounds of milk per cow per day.

National Corn Growers Association Elects New Board Leaders

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has elected a new slate of corn grower leaders as the organization as it represents corn growers on key agricultural issues.

Elections were conducted in July at NCGA's Corn Congress in Washington, D.C.

These directors assumed office Oct. 1, the beginning of NCGA's 2000-2001 fiscal year.

Moving to the helm as NCGA President is Leland Klein. With his wife Sharon, he raises corn, soybeans, rye, alfalfa, and hay in Battle Creek, Neb. Klein also manages a cow/calf operation, and has held many leadership positions in various state and local organizations.

Lynn Jensen, who with his wife Jodi, grows corn, soybeans, edibles and alfalfa in Lake Preston, S.D., is chairman of the board. A farmer for 20 years, Jensen has been active in his state and national corn grower associations for more than eight years.

Newly elected corn growers to the NCGA corn board are:

• Charles Alexander, Stonewall, N.C. Charles and his wife Lois farm 2,200 acres of corn, wheat, and soybeans. Charles has served as past president of the North Carolina Small Grain Association and is a member of the North Carolina Corn Growers Association. Most recently, he served as a member of the NCGA Production and Stewardship Action Team.

• Jim Czub, Schaghticoke, N.Y. Jim and Jackie Czub partner with Jim's brother, farming 2,000 acres of corn, soybeans, and hay. Their farm operation also includes custom farming and grain processing, along with a mining and excavation business. Jim has held several leadership positions in New York and within the NCGA, including service as a corn board member. In that capacity, he has also served as a member of the EPA's Tolerance Reassessment Advisory Committee, responsible for implementation of the Food Quality Preservation Act.

• John Tibbits, Minneapolis, Kan. John and Rosalee Tibbits operate a family farm in northcentral Kansas with both dryland and irrigated crops. They also operate a cattle operation. John has served NCGA and the Kansas Corn Growers Association in many leadership positions. He serves as a corn board member and as a member of the NCGA Finance Committee. He also serves as the NCGA representative to the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

• Dee Vaughan, Dumas, Tex. Dee and Terri Vaughan farm 6,000 acres in the Texas Panhandle, raising corn, seed sorghum, commercial sorghum, soybeans, wheat, and seed sunflowers. They use center pivot irrigation, and are adopting precision farming techniques. Dee has served in several leadership positions with the Lone Star Corn Growers Association and the Texas Corn Producers Checkoff Board. He serves as a member of the NCGA Public Policy Action Team.

• Ron Woollen, Wilcox, Neb. Ron and Sue Woollen operate a family corporation, raising irrigated corn, soybeans and sorghum, and dryland corn, soybeans, sorghum, wheat, sunflowers, and alfalfa. Ron has held several leadership positions for the South Central Corn Growers, the Nebraska Corn Growers Association, and NCGA. He is chairman of the NCGA Grower Services Action Team.

What A Wonderful World Of Corn!

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has debuted the 2000 World of Corn, an annual corn industry "almanac" featuring current and historical corn statistics and summaries of major issues facing the nation's top crop.

"The 2000 World of Corn is full of information on everything from production and export statistics, to the future of biotechnology and the livestock industry," said NCGA President Lynn Jensen of Lake Preston, S.D. "It's a virtual one-stop shop for corn industry information that tells you everything you ever wanted to know about corn, but didn't know where to find it."

The publication features information on U.S. and world corn production, usage and exports; domestic corn consumption by the livestock, ethanol, food and industrial industries; biotechnology; corn crop value; and more.

Commodity Classic Ranks Among Best Ever

ORLANDO, Fla. — A near-record number of growers and industry leaders picked up the latest in agricultural technology, tips on being more efficient and profitable, and ideas on farming's future here at the 2000 Commodity Classic in early March.

A total of 3,792 attended this year's Commodity Classic, the combined convention and trade show of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and the American Soybean Association (ASA). The event also received significant news coverage, with a record 109 print and broadcast media representatives in attendance.

"Once again, growers and leaders attending Commodity Classic profited from their experience," said NCGA President Lynn Jensen of Lake Preston, S.D. "They not only gathered information that will improve their operations, but had a good time in the process."

Some of the highlights of this year's Commodity Classic include:

• A speech by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, who rallied grower support for permanent normal trade relations (NTR) with China — a key priority for the Clinton Administration as well as the NCGA. Glickman noted that as an emerging superpower, China has tremendous growth potential for U.S. trade. "Our markets are already wide open to China, giving us a five-to-one trade deficit," he said. "All the concessions are on their side. We have nothing to lose and everything to gain by passing NTR and allowing China into the WTO (World Trade Organization)."

• An insightful look into the future of agriculture by New Mexico State University economist and futurist Dr. Lowell Catlett, who used one word to summarize the economic, social, and technological future of American agriculture: maybe. "It's the only word that can accurately answer the millions of questions and possibilities that the future presents," Catlett said. "It also symbolizes the practice of not eliminating any single possibility — since nothing is guaranteed or predetermined."

• Presentations by NCGA President Lynn Jensen and ASA President Marc Curtiss who addressed topical agricultural issues such as free trade, biotechnology, risk management, and transportation.

• The latest information on production agriculture technology and the entire industry of agriculture at a variety of educational seminars.

• Marketing clinics, cosponsored by NCGA and ProFarmer, designed to help growers improve their bottom lines.

• A record 654 trade show booths representing 156 companies, offering attendees the latest in technology, products, marketing, and production practices.

• Memorable entertainment by multiple Grammy award winning performer Ricky Skaggs, who regaled the crowd with a variety of bluegrass and Gospel music.

Corn Congress delegates focused on the future when they met during the Commodity Classic to set NCGA policy for the year. A total of 122 delegates, representing 23 states, adopted a vision statement to guide deliberations on federal farm programs in the 2002 farm bill and beyond. It directs NCGA to "evaluate and support farm policy that will ensure that America's farmers are globally competitive, market responsive, and environmentally responsible, and that provides producers with access to world markets, access to capital, access to advances of technology, and risk management, in a sustainable and environmentally sound manner." In addition, delegates voted to oppose any decrease in the marketing assistance loan rate for corn and they voted that the USDA should set the posted county price as the average of the two adjusted terminal prices for the county.

Corn Growers Support Kraft's Taco Recall

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) respects and supports Kraft Food Co.'s announcement recently to voluntarily withdraw Taco Bell Home Original taco shells from grocery store shelves.

Kraft took the action in the wake of claims that the taco shells contained corn carrying StarLink, a type of Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) not yet approved for food markets.

Corn with StarLink Bt, produced by Aventis Crop Science, has EPA approval for use in feed and industrial uses. Food use is pending. All other Bt corn hybrids grown and sold in the U.S. have governmental approval for both food and feed use.

"We share the concern of Kraft, consumers, and the U.S. regulatory agencies in addressing the possible appearance of a not-yet-approved product in food channels. At stake is the reputation and integrity of U.S. corn farmers and the food they produce," said Roger Pine, a farmer from Lawrence, Kan., and chairman of the 32,000-member NCGA.

Pine also serves on the USDA Advisory Committee on Agricultural Biotechnology, a panel of 38 people that advises the ag secretary on biotechnology policy.

"We understand that lab tests are continuing in order to confirm or deny the presence of StarLink DNA. The presence of Cry9C, the StarLink type of Bt, in the tacos, if proven, would indicate a significant breach in the license to use StarLink," said Pine. "Until that question can be answered conclusively, we support Kraft's voluntary withdrawal of the taco shells.

"If tests confirm StarLink's presence, we will work diligently with food companies and regulatory agencies to help identify and correct any flaws in the supply chain," Pine continued. "And, if tests show the tacos don't contain StarLink, we'll help Kraft restock the shelves."

Pine emphasized that this action is occurring because StarLink has allegedly been found in products for which it has not yet been approved. "There is no evidence of allergenicity with the StarLink products. Furthermore, StarLink's use in food has not been rejected by the federal government's approval process but instead is awaiting approval," he noted.

Headquartered in St. Louis, Mo., the organization has been a strong supporter of the U.S. regulatory agencies and systems that approve these and other products. "We will continue to back the rules and regulations required to use this and other technologies. We are committed to meeting these requirements to guarantee the trust and confidence of consumers — whether they are in the U.S., Japan, Europe or anywhere — in the safety and wholesomeness of our food supply."

Pine added that NCGA continues to support the availability and accessibility of biotechnology crops. "We support the commercial release of new hybrids created with the use of biotechnology or conventional breeding that have received full approval from all relevant U.S. regulatory agencies," he said. "Those agencies should expedite the process for reviewing and approving agricultural biotechnology products for use in feed and food. This can be accomplished without sacrificing the rigorous standards consumers expect and deserve.

"We have a sound, safe, abundant food supply," he said, "and we will work hard to reassure consumers that biotechnology products are safe and will be handled in accordance with federal regulations and manufacturer recommendations."

Corn Growers Lead Agriculture In Support Of Fishable Waters Act

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), along with a broad coalition of farmers, anglers, state resource agencies and others, recently joined Sen. Christopher "Kit" Bond (R-Mo.) and Rep. John Tanner (D-Tenn.) as they introduced groundbreaking legislation to restore fisheries habitat and improve water quality nationwide.

The Fishable Waters Act of 2000 will foster the formation of innovative, public-private partnerships to address water quality concerns on an overall watershed basis. The approach relies on voluntary, incentive-based, locally led conservation efforts.

"Our nation's corn growers manage nearly 80 million acres across the United States. And more than 70 percent of the land in the lower 48 states is privately owned. Just think of what could be accomplished for fish and other resources if the farmers and other individuals managing all these acres had the right tools and incentives to multiply their stewardship practices," said Bruce Knight, NCGA vice president for public policy.

"The key to unlocking conservation possibilities for fish and other valuable resources on private land is to educate landowners, provide them the necessary technical and financial assistance, and foster communication among all stakeholders. This is exactly the approach outlined in the Fishable Waters Act," he said.

"Rather than finding new federal monies to create and enforce new regulations on landowners, why not direct new and existing resources to actual on-the-ground projects, at the landowner's request?" Knight asked. "We can achieve much more for our nation's natural resource base, using tax dollars in a cost-efficient manner, by working cooperatively with farmers and ranchers rather than regulating them.

"That's why the nation's corn growers are proud to lead the agriculture community in support of the Fishable Waters Act. We look forward to working with Senator Bond, Congressman Tanner and the Fishable Waters Coalition to see this important legislation enacted," Knight said.

Snyder To Lead National Grain Sorghum Producers Marketing Efforts

LUBBOCK, Texas — National Grain Sorghum Producers (NGSP) announces the addition of Tim S. Snyder to the organization's staff.

Snyder, who was recently named NGSP marketing director, replaces Aaron Johnson, who recently departed NGSP to complete his doctorate and assume a teaching position at Texas Tech University.

Snyder has a bachelor's degree in agricultural economics from Texas Tech University. His 13 years of marketing experience in the pharmaceutical and medical industry includes his role as retail sales director at The Med Group, a national medical equipment marketing association. Snyder also was employed as a commodities broker with Dean Witter Reynolds.

Snyder's duties at NGSP will focus on developing and implementing a strategic marketing and utilization plan to achieve the highest possible market value for grain sorghum.

"The future of sorghum profitability relies on improved yield and new or better markets for our crop," said Leo Bindel, NGSP president.

NCGA Welcomes EPA Report Showing No Risk To Butterflies From Bt Corn

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) is welcoming a report recently by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) that refutes claims about biotech's alleged impact on Monarch butterflies.

In August, research by two Iowa State University entomologists suggested that Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) corn pollen might have an adverse impact on Monarch butterfly populations. However, in a report released recently, the EPA said that tests performed on Bt corn, cotton, and potato crops confirm the agency's original findings that there are "no unreasonable adverse effects" from these products.

"Overall, the available information indicated a very low probability of risks to Monarchs in areas beyond the near-edge of cornfields," The EPA noted. "The agency concludes that the published preliminary Monarch toxicity information is not sufficient to cause undue concern of widespread risks to Monarch butterflies."

Fred Yoder, NCGA corn board member from Plain City, Ohio, said the EPA report is good news for corn growers.

"The EPA is adding credence to our assertions that Bt technology is not detrimental to butterflies and other nontarget species," he said, adding NCGA's support of access to biotechnology and the stringent U.S. regulatory process.

"NCGA fully supports the science-based decision-making process employed by the EPA in evaluating and approving Bt technology," Yoder said. "NCGA supports continued evaluation of all agricultural production techniques as well as the availability of biotechnology to those who choose to implement it."

National Grain Sorghum Producers Elects Officers

LUBBOCK, Texas — Leo Bindel, a sorghum producer from Sabetha, Kan., was elected to lead National Grain Sorghum Producers (NGSP) as national president during NGSP's winter board meeting in conjunction with the 2000 Sorghum Industry Conference recently in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Bindel, who previously served as vice president for legislation, has served on the NGSP board of directors for six years.

Rounding out the officer team are Dale Artho of Wildorado, Texas, who was re-elected as vice president for domestic market development; Dale Spurgin of Allen, Texas, who was elected to another term as vice president for foreign market development; Ken Rose of Keyes, Okla., who was re-elected as vice president for research; Bill Kubecka from Palacios, Texas, who was elected as vice president for legislation; James Vorderstrasse of Hebron, Neb., who was re-elected as NGSP secretary-treasurer; and, Ken Tevis, of Hughesville, Mo., who will serve the organization as past president.

The NGSP board of directors is made up of sorghum producers from six states. These representatives are elected by their state associations, with board representation based on the number of members from each state. States with sorghum checkoff programs that provide financial support to NGSP also have representation on the board, although checkoff representatives do not vote on legislative issues.

NGSP is the national organization for U.S. sorghum producers.

Preserving Your Farm's Legacy Starts With A Buffer Strip

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — When it comes to preserving our precious environment, words are plentiful, but deeds are what truly counts.

That's why the USDA has increased its emphasis on conservation buffers by launching the National Conservation Buffer Initiative with a goal of encouraging farmers to install two million miles of conservation buffers by the year 2002.

Environmental stewardship is also a primary goal of the NCGA, which supports education on best management, practices, encourages local voluntary action on environmental issues, and recognizes growers for their stewardship efforts.

NCGA and the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) are leading this national effort with conservation and environmental organizations, educational organizations and most important, U.S. corn farmers.

Conservationists and soil experts agree that almost every farm gains discernible benefits from installing buffer strips. Besides the environmental benefits, a field border buffer strip provides a place to operate and turn around heavy equipment, which leads to reduced compaction. Field borders near steep slopes and river banks can also increase safety in the same way.

Here are a few key reasons why buffers just make good business and environmental sense:

- Properly installed and maintained buffers can help reduce sediment in runoff water up to 75 percent.
- Buffers can remove up to 50 percent or more of certain nutrients. They can also help filter a large percentage of certain pathogens.
- Buffers protect people, crops, livestock, buildings, wildlife, and roads from wind-blown soil, snow, or other materials.
- The efficiencies of buffers can be increased by considering buffers as one part of a complete resource system for your farm or ranch.

Under the new farm bill, many buffer strips may also be entered into the continuous Conservation Reserve Program sign-up. Land can be entered at any time and farmers do not have to wait for the USDA to announce a time.

The difference between continuous and annual sign-up is that the continuous sign-up is meant specifically for small parcels of land, such as buffer strips. The annual sign-up, is meant for whole fields and larger tracts of land.

While buffer strips are voluntary, there are indications that this could change in the future.

But voluntary water-quality improvement efforts have a limited amount of time to demonstrate positive results before mandatory regulations may be put in place.

Voluntary conservation practices, such as the conservation buffer initiative, helps NCGA and your state association achieve a very important goal while preserving a precious resource — our environment.

For more information on how to install a buffer, visit your local NCRS or Farm Services Agency office.

The Best Rotary Combine Gets Even Better

Still Simply the Best.

A Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combine has only ONE moving part in it's entire threshing/separating process . . . a single large-diameter rotor. Open up the side shield on any other rotary combine and compare it to the drive mechanism, and you will see that the Case-IH rotary combine has fewer moving parts, which means fewer problems. Because the more moving parts there are, the greater your chance of breaking down.

The new 2001 model Axial-Flow Combines make you even more productive with the following enhancements:

Hydraulic Feeder Reverser
A new hydraulic feeder reverser, located on the left-hand side of the feeder jackshaft replaces the electric feeder reverser on previous models. The reverser will deliver 50% more torque to the feeder driveshaft compared to the output of the electric reverser.

Side Adjust Sieve Ready - All Models
The 2001 model combines will be ready to accept a future side adjust sieve feature. This will be available as a Service Parts Kit

New View Door and Light
the 2001 models will have a new side-viewing door with a light for easier visibility of the chopper and chaffer sieves

12 Row Corn Head Capable
Factory options are available for the 2001 model 2388 to be capable of handling the size and weight of the 2200 series 12 row corn heads

New Fuel Tank
The 2001 Model 2388 combines will have a new 180 gallon fuel tank - a 46% increase in capacity over the 123 gallon tank on previous models

New Exit Lighting
This feature will enhance visibility when exiting the cab after dark This light will stay lit for 30 seconds allowing the operator to exit down the ladder safely

Harvest More Ears In Less Time

The all-new Case IH 2200 Series corn heads are designed to provide exceptional value in crop harvesting. Larger diameter cantilevered stalk rolls are designed to offer greater capacity – allowing for faster harvesting speeds. Optional in-cab hydraulic adjustable stripper plates are also available. Low profile hoods and poly-dividers effectively "hug" the ground, moving more ears into the header to increase efficiency and productivity... which means more profit for you.

CORN BITS

Corn Glossary

Atole: Finely ground and toasted cornmeal stirred into a liquid, usually water or milk, with or without flavorings such as chili, chocolate, and sugar. Used for a drink or desserts. In the Southwest, blue corn atole is common. Pinole is an interchangeable term.

Chicos: Dried sweet corn kernels, usually used in stews. A term common to the Southwest.

Corn Flour: Finely ground cornmeal of any kind. Masa harina is an alkali-processed corn flour.

Cornmeal: Ground kernels of any kind of corn, usually a dent, flint, or flour type. The corn can be ground to any degree of coarseness or fineness. Commercial "wet milling" removes the hull and germ of the corn kernel and fragments the kernel into its components of starch, sugar, and oil. Commercial "dry milling" removes the germ before grinding the rest of the kernel. The best meal is whole-grain with the germ in.

Cornstarch: Industrially processed starch extracted from the starch components of corn.

Grits: Ground cornmeal, coarse or fine, white or yellow, and the mush that is made from that meal. Originally the meal was ground from hominy or whole kernels and processed with alkali to remove the skins. Today hominy is found most frequently canned and packed in a light brine.

Samp: Coarsely cracked corn.

Huitlacoche: Mexican term for the sweet corn mushroom, or fungus, that Americans call "corn smut."

Maize or Maiz: Historically the proper generic name for the grain native to the Western Hemisphere. Latin name Zeamays. America's use of the word "corn" for maize comes from the British English, where corn means any kind of grain.

Masa: Mexican term for the dough produced by grinding wet corn kernels processed with alkali.

Masa harina: Mexican term for this same dough, dried and pulverized into fine corn flour. Works like an "instant" flour.

Nixtamal: Mexican term for wet whole kernels freshly processed with alkali.

Polenta: Italian term for cornmeal and for mush or porridge made with that meal.

Posole: Mexican term for dried whole kernels processed with alkali and for the soup/stews made with these kernels.

Corn, Agricultural Vision: Future Renewable Chemical Building Blocks

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has a story to tell about checkoff-funded research that has the potential of increasing the price per bushel of corn by a minimum of 50 cents per year.

That research is funded under the Agricultural Vision, the Plant/Crop-Based Renewable Resources Vision 2020 program at the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE).

"Picture this research as a conversion of corn and other renewable inputs to chemical building blocks that would be used to produce a wide range of everyday consumer goods such as plastics, paints, carpet fibers, adhesives, antifreeze, and personal care products," said Vic Miller, a grower from Oelwein, Iowa, and a member of NCGA's Customer and Business Development Action Team. "The Agricultural Vision is for plants, instead of petroleum, to serve as the feedstock for 10 percent of the chemical building blocks market by 2020 and 50 percent by 2050."

Since 1997, the NCGA, in cooperation with the DOE, has championed the Renewables Resources 2020, a broad-based coalition of agricultural, forestry, and chemical industry experts working to create plant-based, renewable products that would replace petroleum-based products as fossil-fuel supplies dwindle.

"The program is focused solely on funding projects that will use plants instead of petroleum for chemical building blocks. While the program does not fund ethanol, a completely separate research and policy program of the NCGA, using plants for industrial feedstocks has the potential in the future to be an extremely significant market for corn," said Miller.

Gaining 10 percent of the market, he notes, would represent a five-fold increase from today's tiny market share of the chemical building blocks in the Agricultural Vision, he said.

In recent testimony to the House Subcommittee on Interior Committee on Appropriations, Miller pushed for a minimum of $13 million in funding for the Agricultural Vision. "If plants were the feedstock for 10 percent of this market, farm income would increase by more than $5 billion (or 50 cents per bushel) per year, greenhouse gas emissions would be reduced, recycling opportunities would be increased and, most importantly, our dependence on foreign oil would decrease."

Miller noted that recent experiences illustrate how the power of unstable oil exporting companies dramatically affect the price of gasoline, heating oil, and many consumer goods such as plastic because of the U.S. increasing reliance on imported oil.

"The U.S. currently imports more than 50 percent of domestic petroleum consumption. By 2020, net imports will grow more than 65 percent," he said. "While we have a finite supply of fossil fuels, we have abundant plant/crop based resources that are renewable over short periods of time. The most significant opportunity to help offset the need for imported oil is the use of alternative feedstocks that can be derived from renewable plants and crops."

He emphasized that renewable materials from American-grown crops can provide many of the same basic chemical building blocks as petrochemicals, and can provide others that petrochemicals cannot.

"To achieve the bold vision, we must begin laying the research foundation today," Miller said. "If we are to realize, fully, the potential for biobased resources as a supplement to fossil fuels, we need new routes for more efficient processing and utilization as well as a whole range of plant-derived building blocks. Now is the time for significant research and development on what renewable and novel processes might be available, and for beginning to develop selection criteria among the possible alternatives."

Interdisciplinary Research To Improve Quality Corn Silage

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — "When I started at Penn State in 1989," said Greg Roth, associate professor of agronomy," corn wasn't managed specifically for silage. People often used corn that didn't fare too well for silage.

But since then, producers have begun to realize that the yield and quality of silage can be an important factor in the profitability of their farming enterprise. There's a nationwide trend toward increasing silage in feed, especially at larger dairies, so the silage quality is becoming more important."

Now, after more than a decade of research and extension education on silage quality, "We have started producers thinking about the kinds of things that influence silage quality," said Roth. "On a 100 cow dairy, improved silage quality can increase milk production by about $10,000 per year. Farmers now recognize that silage is a high value crop. Making producers aware of these issues allows them to remain competitive in the marketplace."

Roth's work in this area began when farmers started to ask whether certain hybrids were better than others for producing silage and about harvesting recommendations. He and his research team, including research support technologist Mark Antle, studied the timing of harvest for optimal silage quality and found that yield and quality decrease if the corn is allowed to mature for too long. They recommend harvesting when the kernel moisture content is between 63 and 70 percent, a measurement producers can make themselves.

In 1994, Roth worked with several county agents to examine the effect of using narrower rows and higher per acre plant populations for silage corn than was traditional for grain corn. They found that narrower rows measuring 15 to 20-inches wide boosted the yield by about five percent over conventional row spacing (30-inches wide), producing an additional ton of silage per acre.

They also found that optimum yield was obtained by planting 30,000 to 32,000 plants per acre. This allowed an additional five percent increase in yield over traditionally recommended plant populations in corn for grain.

By combining the narrower row spacing with the increased plant populations, producers could increase their yields by about 10 percent.

Roth's team found that row spacing had no effect on the quality of the silage. They did find, however, that silage quality decreased as the plant population increased, but some of this loss of quality was offset by the increased yield.

In the mid-1990s, seed companies introduced silage-only corn hybrids, and Roth began evaluating those for producers. He found that many hybrids do well in narrow row, high population management programs.

Roth worked with Dick Fox, professor of soil science, and Bill Piekielek, research support associate, to determine optimum nitrogen rates for silage hybrids. They found that the economic optimum nitrogen rate was 20-pounds nitrogen per acre higher for silage corn than that recommended for grain corn, because the protein content of the silage and its value increase as the nitrogen rate increases.

Roth has been working for several years with Jud Heinrichs, professor of dairy and animal science, and Dennis Buckmaster, associate professor of agricultural engineering, to further refine knowledge about silage quality. "In the past 10 years," said Roth, "we've seen a great increase in the sophistication of analysis methods that people are considering to characterize silage crops."

With Heinrichs, Roth is evaluating the effects of corn silage particle size on cow health. To maintain the health of a dairy cow's rumen, the diet must contain food particles of a variety of sizes.

If too much of the food is finely chopped, the rumen will produce too much acid and the cow will have to be culled from the herd.

About four years ago, Heinrichs and Buckmaster developed a sieving device to determine the particle size of mixed rations, including silage, so that producers can feed a size-balanced ration. "Now virtually all the forage analysis labs and feed companies and many farmers have one of these sieves and use it to measure the forage particle size," said Heinrichs. "It allows them to do a better job of ration balancing," which is very closely tied to herd health and profitability.

Heinrichs, Roth, and Buckmaster are developing a physical effective fiber index that would be applied to silage and other forages to describe both the chemical and physical components — including particle size — of the fiber present. The index would allow a farmer to know how the forage will affect a cow's digestion without conducting expensive, time-consuming feeding trials. Heinrichs and Roth hope over the next few years to test the index on many varieties and cuts of forage in the field.

Interdisciplinary Research To Improve Quality Corn Silage

studying processing techniques and the effects of processing on feed value and storability of silage. The feed quality of silage depends on how it is prepared. Kernel processing involves running the corn through corrugated steel rollers on a field chopper. This crushes the kernels and breaks up the cob slices, which, if left whole, are less preferred by the cows. Crushing also increases the starch digestibility of the silage and makes it a more uniform feed.

Funded by the USDA's Special Grants-Pennsylvania Dairy Profitability program, Buckmaster's former graduate student Larry Hoover studied the interactions and effects of different lengths of silage cut, levels of processing, and moisture contents on particle size, silage compaction, and digestibility. Hoover documented a reduction in particle size by processing and found that long-chopped silage packs well if it is processed before ensiling.

Buckmaster, Ph.D. candidate Min Zhang, and Glen Cauffman, manager of the University's farm operations, are developing a new silage harvesting machine that harvests corn silage much differently than a conventional precision-cut harvester. Their hope is that this machine will maximize the nutritional value and use of each part (grain, fodder, and cob) of the corn plant.

The team will then use a whole-farm model to evaluate silage processed by the new machine and to determine its effect on milk production and farm profitability.

"The benefit to the farmer hopefully will be increased profitability through increased utilization of corn silage," said Buckmaster. He also hopes that the new machine will be mechanically simpler and less expensive than present technology.

Roth believes the interdisciplinary research on silage hybrids has benefited Pennsylvania farmers by creating an awareness of the potential to produce better corn silage.

"Producers now recognize that silage quality can improve herd health, milk production, and their bottom line. With a reasonable amount of attention to management, we can significantly increase the feed quality and improve the profitability of these operations."

NCGA Makes Fuel Act Statement

Bruce Knight
NCGA Vice President
Public Policy

The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and its 30,000 farmer-members applaud Sens. Tom Daschle (D-S.D.) and Richard Lugar (R-Ind.) for their efforts to address the environmental and health risks posed by methyl tertiary butyl ether (MTBE) and to promote the use of domestically produced, renewable fuels such as ethanol.

However, we are concerned about their proposal to waive the Clean Air Act's oxygen content requirement for federal reformulated gasoline (RFG).

Instead, the nation's corn growers prefer the approach taken in H.R. 4011, the Clean Air and Water Preservation Act of 2000. This bill, and a companion measure expected to be introduced in the Senate by Sen. Kit Bond (R-Mo.), would ban MTBE but maintain the oxygenate requirement and give refiners additional flexibility in producing RFG. We believe that this is the best option for both farmers and the environment.

The use of oxygen in RFG is responsible for major air quality improvements in many of the nation's most polluted cities. Ethanol, made from corn and other renewable sources, provides these clean air benefits without the water pollution problems posed by petroleum-based MTBE. Given the ready availability of ethanol as an alternative to MTBE, we see no reason to abandon the oxygenate requirement.

While we support the senators' vision of a national renewable fuel standard for all gasoline, we question its political feasibility at this point in time. Thus, without assurances that such a standard will be enacted, we are hesitant to abandon the oxygenate requirement — a proven successful approach that's already on the books.

Don't Turn Your Back On Biotech

NORCROSS, Ga. — It's hard to believe how fast our world is changing. Technological innovations are everywhere — computers, cell phones, digital this and digital that. And now we are hearing more and more about biotechnology.

Agriculture has already embraced biotechnology. In just a few years, large acreages of bioengineered crops have been planted in the U.S., Canada, and other countries. Herbicide resistant and/or insect protected corn, soybeans, canola, cotton, and potatoes comprise most of the acreage presently being planted. This is a good deal for farmers because their crops are protected without the use of pesticides — at least for certain pests. So they can save both time and money.

Advances in biotechnology can also lead to more efficient fertilizer use. Crops not suffering from disease or insect damage are more responsive to applied nutrients. Such responses lead to greater nutrient utilization, higher yield, and lower unit cost of production.

Biotechnology benefits more than just the farmer. We, the consumer, benefit in several ways. Pesticide residues on food are reduced or eliminated altogether, as are concerns over pesticides entering surface and ground water supplies. Better utilized fertilizer materials also translates into less opportunity for leaching of these essential inputs into water supplies. Such efficiencies will also help keep our food prices among the lowest of any country in the world.

The potential benefits of biotechnology are enormous. We haven't even begun to scratch the surface. For example, yield potential may be substantially increased with new bioengineered crops. This is certainly important for a world population that recently passed six billion and is expected to reach eight billion within 50 years. Perhaps crops will be developed that are adapted to saline soil, shorter growing seasons, or high elevations — areas that are relatively unproductive today — or they may be developed with larger root systems capable of extracting water more efficiently and from greater soil depths, making them suitable for arid regions where irrigation water is limited or very expensive.

An important consideration, perhaps the most important to the general public, is food quality. Potential benefits to consumers seem virtually unlimited. Biotechnology provides the opportunity to develop crops that have very specific quality components. Bioengineered rice, for example, has already been produced that contains a high concentration of beta carotene. Beta carotene is converted into vitamin A in the body, and it is estimated that more than 120 million children worldwide are deficient in vitamin A. Widespread distribution of this rice could prevent one to two million deaths each year.

Foods such as the rice just discussed, containing ingredients that enhance health and fitness, are called "functional foods." The active ingredients are nutraceuticals. There are dozens of nutraceuticals known to reduce such illnesses as cancer, diabetes, hypertension, and heart disease. Biotechnology offers the opportunity to fortify our diets in these beneficial ingredients.

So don't turn your back on biotechnology. We need it to produce an abundant quantity of healthy food for today and tomorrow.

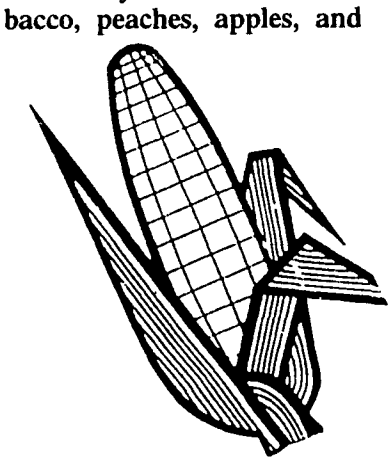
State, National Corn Forecasts Indicate High Yields

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — According to the Keystone Ag Digest published by the Pennsylvania Agriculture Statistics Service, based on Aug. 1 forecasts for yield and production, the Keystone state's farmers expect to produce more corn for grain, oats, barley, wheat, soybeans, alfalfa hay, other hay, southern Maryland-type tobacco, and pears. Production is expected to decrease for Pennsylvania seed-leaf tobacco, peaches, apples, and grapes.



Corn acreage for harvest, at 1.05 million bushels, is 19 percent more than last year. The Aug. 1 corn yield forecast of 127 bushels per acre is 57 bushels more than last year's yield. The corn production forecast of 133.4 million bushels is 117 percent more than last year.

For the U.S., corn production is forecast at 10.4 billion bushels, up 10 percent from last year and up 6 percent from 1998.

Based on Aug. 1 conditions, yields are expected to average 141.9 bushels per acre, up 8.1 bushels from last year. If realized, this would be the largest production and the highest yield on record since 1866, when corn estimates began. Grain harvested is estimated at 73.1 million acres, down 29,000 acres from June, but up 4 percent from 1999.

DES MOINES, Iowa — Robert Shearer, Mount Joy, Pa., was recognized recently as a 1999 National Grain Sorghum Producers (NGSP) Yield Contest winner. The award presentation was made Feb. 20 during the NGSP annual conference in Corpus Christi, Texas.

The 14th annual NGSP Yield Contest recognized 100 state winners and 15 national winners in six divisions: non-irrigated and irrigated conventional tillage, non-irrigated no-till, non-irrigated and irrigated mulch-till, and irrigated ridge-till.

As a third-time NGSP yield contestant, Shearer placed first in the state conventional non-irrigated division. Pioneer® brand 8282 gave him the winning grain sorghum yield of 75.02 bushels per acre.

Shearer farms with his wife, Doreen, their two sons, Bobby, 15, and Michael, 12, and their daughter, Ashley, 9. The Shearers' operation also includes corn, soybeans, barley, and hogs.

Not all fields have the same production capacity, so management decisions including seed selection and irrigation play a large role in determining grain sorghum yield, said John Muenzenberger, sorghum product manager at Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

Corn Growers Ready To Embrace Opportunities Offered By Normalized Trade

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and its 32,000 farmer-members welcomed news of the long-awaited Senate vote in favor of permanent normal trade relations (PNTR) for China.

"This vote brings American agriculture one step closer to being able to capitalize on the opportunities that will be created by China's admission to the World Trade Organization (WTO)," said NCGA President Lynn Jensen, who farms near Lake Preston, S.D.

Under the groundbreaking WTO accession agreement negotiated last year, China consented to eliminate export subsidies and significantly improve market access for a wide variety of U.S. food and agriculture products. In return, the U.S. agreed to grant China PNTR status.

"Quite simply, this is a great one-way deal for U.S. agriculture. We gain access to the largest market in the world — and we give up nothing in return," Jensen said.

As part of the accession agreement, China has committed to establish a tariff rate quota (TRQ) for corn. In its first year of WTO membership, China has agreed to allow access for 4.5 million metric tons (177 million bushels) of corn. That level is set to increase to 7.2 million metric tons (283 million bushels) by the fourth year.

"This will give U.S. farmers the opportunity to build markets, rather than wait for China to let U.S. corn in," Jensen explained.

"But perhaps the most exciting provision is China's commitment to eliminate export subsidies," he said. "In recent years, China has increased its corn production in response to high domestic support prices and has exported the resulting surpluses at the expense of U.S. corn farmers. If China no longer subsidizes its exports, U.S. corn will be very competitive in markets that have been buying subsidized Chinese corn," he said.

"The nation's corn growers are gratified that both chambers of Congress have now voted to give us open access to the all-important Chinese market, rather than pandering to the protectionists who refuse to recognize that we operate in a global economy," Jensen said.

WISCONSIN DAIRY FEEDING TRIALS FOCUS ON CORN SILAGE ISSUES

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

A recent report from the University of Wisconsin has summarized a number of interesting feeding trials that have focused on some timely corn silage feeding issues. Wisconsin researchers have focused on corn silage because they see an increasing trend for feeding more corn silage to dairy cattle in the upper Midwest. Their trials have focused on evaluating the effects of stage of maturity, crop processing and chop length, and hybrid quality on lactation performance.

In a maturity trial they conducted, corn was harvested at early dent, 1/4 milkline, 2/3 milkline and black layer for silage. These silages ranged from 69.9 to 58.0 percent moisture. As maturity was delayed, the NDF of the silages decreased from 52 to 41.3 percent. In this trial, milk production was maximized at the 2/3 milk line stage when the silage was 64.9 percent moisture. In a second trial, they evaluated silages at early dent (71 percent moisture), half milk line (64 percent moisture), and black layer (48 percent moisture). In this trial, milk production was highest at the early dent stage. The researchers found in both trials that both ruminal starch digestibility and fiber digestibility were decreased at the BL stage.

Based on the results of this trial and agronomic trials that have shown no yield increase beyond the half milk line stage, the authors concluded that a target of 65 percent moisture seemed best but that producers should begin harvesting at 70 percent moisture to avoid silage drying down excessively by the end of harvest. In a summary of forage analyses conducted at a Wisconsin forage testing lab, they have found that on average corn silage moisture contents have increased 4-5 percentage units during the last decade from 58 to 63 percent, so producers are moving away from drier silages.

Another study focused on processing of corn silage. Previous studies have shown milk responses of 0 to 2 pounds of milk per cow per day. In this study, the control corn silage (half milk line and 67 percent moisture) was chopped at 3/8 inch TLC without rolling using a pull-type chopper. Treatment corn silages were harvested at 3/8 inch, 9/16 inch, and 3/4 inch TLC and rolled using the same pull-type chopper fitted with a crop processor. The processor was set at a one-millimeter roll spacing. Silages were evaluated using a particle size separator. The researchers noted whole and half cobs in the coarse fractions of the separator for the unrolled silage. These are prone to separation in the feedbunk. Cows fed the rolled silages on average ate 1.5 pounds more diet DM each day than cows fed unrolled silage. Cows fed the rolled silages on average produced 2.5 pounds more milk and 3.5 more FCM each day than cows fed unrolled silage. Milk fat test was .10 percent units higher on average for cows fed the rolled silages, possibly due to less sorting of the cobs in the bunk.

There were no differences among the rolled silages in dry matter intake, milk yield, or milk composition. Based on this research the authors recommend a 3/4 inch TLC with a 1 mm roller clearance, except on wetter silages where the roller clearance may be expanded to 2 to 3 mm clearance. The authors were hesitant to recommend longer chop lengths due to the potential for equipment wear and less packing in the silo.

The authors also have evaluated the variation in mean particle length (MPL) and percent coarse particles of processed silages produced on commercial dairies in Wisconsin. There were large variations in both indicators, suggesting that commercial operators could improve on their chopping and rolling practices. Also, wide ranges in bunker silo densities were also reported.

In another study, the researchers evaluated the in situ digestibility of processed and unprocessed corn silage harvested at different stage. They conducted this trial to evaluate whether it would be feasible to delay harvesting by using a crop processor. They found that processing corn silage harvested at black layer could improve the starch degradability but could not restore it to levels in earlier harvested silage. Also, processing did not improve the digestibility of the fiber in the corn silage, which was reduced at the black layer stage compared to earlier harvests. Thus, it does not appear that harvesting should be delayed when using a processor.

The researchers also conducted two trials evaluating hybrid differences. In the first trial they compared a conventional hybrid (Pioneer 3563) to a leafy hybrid (Mycogen TMF 106). Hybrids were evaluated at two plant populations–24,000 plants per acre or 32,000 plants per acre. These were chopped at 3/4 inch TLC without a processor and fed in a ration that consisted of 2/3 of the forage from corn silage and 1/3 from alfalfa. They observed lower ADF digestibility and higher starch digestibility with the leafy hybrid. The higher starch digestibility was presumably due to the softer kernel texture of the leafy hybrid. They found no milk production difference among hybrids or population treatments. Silages varied in these trials by 2 units in NDF and 2.8 units in digestibility, yet no milk response was noted. These results are similar to another trial recently conducted at the University of Minnesota. Based on these results, the authors suggested that with regard to leafy hybrids and normal hybrids, hybrid selection could be based on yield per acre and agronomic performance.

In another trial conducted with a brown midrib (BMR) hybrid and a normal hybrid, they formulated rations to be low forage with the normal hybrid and high forage with the BMR hybrid. In this trial, the BMR diet produced similar dry matter intakes even though the BMR diet had 13 percent higher forage. The high forage BMR diet produced less milk, however, compared to the low forage control diet. In other trials at Michigan State, BMR silages produced 5 to 7 pounds more milk per day when fed in similar diets. The Wisconsin researchers concluded that "more research with various types of diets is needed to optimize the utilization of BMR corn silage in dairy cattle diets."

Departments Of Agriculture, Environmental Protection Sponsor Ethanol Workshop

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. recently welcomed guests to "Ethanol for a Cleaner, More Prosperous Pennsylvania," a workshop at the Holiday Inn Harrisburg-Hershey.

The Department of Agriculture, along with the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) and the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) Office of Fuels Development, sponsored the one-day workshop.

"High fuel costs and increased dependency on imported oil have sparked renewed interest in the production of clean-burning alternative fuels for Pennsylvania and its citizens, businesses, and industry," Hayes said. "Ethanol is extremely important as an agribusiness product. This workshop offers Pennsylvania agribusiness a look at the 21st century answer to today's need for developing cleaner, environmentally friendly fuels."

The ethanol workshop, funded by a Pennsylvania Biomass Energy Grant awarded by the Northeast Governors Association, addresses the manufacture of traditional grain ethanol and new forms of biomass ethanol production.

Biomass ethanol is produced from the fermentation of varied cellulose sources. Typically, plant residues from harvested crops, such as corncobs and stalks, cereal straw, or seed hulls are the most common source. Wood and other herbaceous plants can be processed into ethanol as well.

"With today's interest in renewable energy sources, and the increased national concern about energy independence, ethanol production offers commonwealth producers great opportunity," Hayes said. "With Pennsylvania's abundant resources, producers have more opportunity than ever before to develop the commonwealth's ethanol industry.

"This is important to the future of our nation's transportation fuel supply because ethanol production will be possible in nearly every region of the country using low-cost resources such as agricultural residues and wood wastes."

The United States uses more than 1.7 billion gallons of ethanol today, which is blended up to 10 percent with gasoline.

Ethanol Supporters Urge Passage Of Reformulated Fuels Act

NCGA and the Renewable Fuels Association recently urged President Clinton and his administration to support passage of the Federal Reformulated Fuels Act (S. 2962) before the conclusion of the 106th Congress.

The bill, which was approved Sept. 7 by the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, would ban MTBE in four years and create a national program requiring the use of renewable fuels.

In a Sept. 19 letter to Clinton, NCGA President Lynn Jensen and RFA President Eric Vaughn wrote, "There has never been a more pressing need to promote the increased value-added production of domestic, renewable fuel ethanol.

They noted that the Clean Alternative Fuels Program proposed in S. 2962 would generate jobs, increase farm income, reduce farm program expenditures, and reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil.

It's time to turn up the heat and tell Congress to pass renewable fuels legislation this year. Visit NCGA's home page (www.ncga.com) for more information on how you can help.

Corn Checkoff Dollars Launch Fiber Research Project

The NCGA and Archer Daniel Midland (ADM) on Sept. 15 announced the beginning of a new two-year research project partnership that is expected to expand corn markets.

The goal of the research is to create a commercial manufacturing process that converts corn fiber or bran into higher valued products. These would include chemical feedstocks such as ethylene glycol and propylene glycol for antifreeze, and fuels such as ethanol.

Corn fiber or bran is an abundant by-product of the wet milling industry and is used as low-priced feed. The project won't provide a quick-fix to the current low prices corn growers are facing because of the nation's 10 billion-bushel corn crop. But it is another example of how NCGA has been using grower checkoff dollars to fund research that creates higher valued products from corn.

Producing the higher valued products will grind more corn, and reducing the supply of corn ultimately improves prices. Growers will benefit from the entire project and leverage their investment of checkoff dollars 10-to-1.

In the $2.5 million project, NCGA, as the project manager, will contribute $250,000 in staff management and ADM will provide about $600,000 in researcher time and other resources. DOE has awarded a $1.7 million grant for the research. Battelle Pacific Northwest National Laboratory of Richland, Wash., is a subcontractor for the project.

This is another milestone on the road to biobased industries and new markets for renewable resources. DOE's Vision for the Agricultural Industry of the Future program has a goal of having renewable resources provide 10 percent of the consumer chemical feedstock market by 2020. The $1.7 million DOE grant is part of DOE's Bioproducts and Bioenergy Technology program, a new effort that develops opportunities in bioproducts, biopower and biofuels.

NCGA Welcomes EPA Report Showing No Risk To Butterflies From Bt Corn

The NCGA welcomed a report recently by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) that refutes claims about biotech's alleged impact on Monarch butterflies.

CORN TALK NEWS

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

In August, research by two Iowa State University entomologists suggested that Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) corn pollen might have an adverse impact on Monarch butterfly populations. However, the EPA said that tests performed on Bt corn, cotton, and potato crops confirm the agency's original findings that there are "no unreasonable adverse effects from these products."

"Overall, the available information indicated a very low probability of risks to Monarchs in areas beyond the near-edge of cornfields," the EPA noted. The agency concludes that the published preliminary Monarch toxicity information is not sufficient to cause undue concern of widespread risks to Monarch butterflies.

'Know Where to Go' With Biotech Grain

Recently, Genetic ID announced it had detected Cry9C in Taco Bell taco shells.

Cry9C, or StarLink, a biotech protein developed by Aventis Corp., has not received approval for food use in the U.S. or abroad.

NCGA is skeptical about the report for several reasons: less than one-half of one percent of total 2000 U.S. corn acreage is planted to biotech corn containing Cry9C, and NCGA questions the validity of Genetic ID's findings, largely because of its own skepticism of biotechnology, the antibiotech stand of the group that ordered the testing, and its past record of drawing conclusions about the presence of genetically modified materials that were later proven inaccurate.

Regardless of the alleged findings, NCGA is stepping up its "Know Where To Go" campaign for harvested biotech corn, reminding all participants in the food production chain to take special care in handling hybrids contain StarLink and any corn grown within 660 feet of it.

According to the licensing agreement, grain from StarLink hybrids is to be directed into domestic feed and non-food industrial markets. Likewise, this grain is not approved for export sale, and must be kept out of these markets.

Senate Overwhelmingly Supports China PNTR

The Senate showed its overwhelming support for free trade and for U.S. farmers Sept. 19, voting 83-15 in favor of permanent normal trade relations (PNTR) for China.

"This vote brings American agriculture one step closer to being able to capitalize on the opportunities that will be created by China's admission to the World Trade Organization," said NCGA President Lynn Jensen.

Under the groundbreaking WTO accession agreement negotiated last year, China consented to eliminate export subsidies and significantly improve market access for a wide variety of U.S. food and agriculture products. In return, the United States agreed to grant China PNTR status.

"Quite simply, this is a great one-way deal for U.S. agriculture. We gain access to the largest market in the world — and we give up nothing in return," Jensen said.

NCGA Honors U.S. Leaders For Genome Support

The NCGA and 25 other agricultural and scientific organizations honored key U.S. leaders for their significant contributions to and support for plant genomics and agricultural research recently at a reception in Washington, D.C. Those honored were Sen. Christopher "Kit" S. Bond (R-MO), Sen. Thad Cochran (R-MS), Sen. Herbert H. Kohl (D-WI), Rep. Joe Skeen (R-NM) and Rep. Marcy Kaptur (D-OH).

NCGA representatives at the reception were CEO Rick Tolman, director of business development/corn processing research, Rene Shunk, and consultant Kellye Ebersole.

NCGA Represented At TIGR Genomic Conference

Boyd Smith of York, Neb., a member of the Customer and Business Development Action Team, Rene Shunk of the NCGA staff, and consultant Kellye Ebersole represented the NCGA at the 12th International Genome Sequencing and Analysis Conference, sponsored by The Institute for Genomic Research (TIGR) in Miami, Fla.

The conference offered an opportunity for attendees to learn about the latest in the field of genomics. Sessions on both plant and human genomics were led by cutting-edge research scientists.

NCGA representatives also met individually with leading scientists to discuss the future potential of corn genomics research.

Bill To Raise Payment Limited Introduced In Senate

Sen. Peter Fitzgerald (R-Ill.) recently introduced S. 3049, a bill to increase the payment limit on marketing loan gains and loan deficiency payments.

Joining Fitzgerald in his effort were Sens. Dick Durbin (D-Ill.), John Edwards (D-N.C.), and John Ashcroft (R-Mo.). This bill is a companion to H.R. 4894, introduced in the House by Reps. Jo Ann Emerson (R-Mo.) and Marion Berry (D-Ark.) in July. Both bills would raise the payment limit from $75,000 to $150,000.

The major difference is that the Senate bill applies only to 2000 production, while the House bill would raise the payment limit for the life of the Farm Bill.

NCGA has been working closely with both chambers to ensure immediate action on this important issue. Your input is needed as well. Please visit the Legislative Action Center on NCGA's web site (www.congress.nw.dc.us/ncga), click on "Current Legislation," and look for the bills under the category "Farm Programs." Here, you can easily send e-mail messages urging your senators and representatives to sign on as cosponsors.

'Spring Rise' Proposal Would Be Bad News For Farmers

Iowa Corn Growers Association leader David Sieck represented NCGA and the American Soybean Association at a news conference Sept. 13 in Washington regarding responsible management of the Missouri River.

He joined Sens. Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa), Kit Bond (R-Mo.) and John Ashcroft (R-Mo.), who are leading the effort to stop implementation of a controversial U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) plan to alter water levels along the Missouri.

This so-called "spring rise" would hamper farmers' ability to plant crops and would wreak havoc with the barge transportation system.

"For those of us farming along the river, dealing with its unpredictability is a fact of life," Sieck said. "What makes things particularly difficult for us, though, is dealing with the unpredictability of certain policies and proposals governing the management of the river."

The Senate version of the FY 2001 energy and water appropriations bill contains language prohibiting FWS from implementing the spring rise proposal, but the House version of the bill does not include similar language. This discrepancy must be worked out by a conference committee.

Fertilize Your Crop, Not Weeds

NORCROSS, Ga. — It doesn't take many weeds in a grain crop to reduce yields. Weeds decrease crop yield because they compete with the crop for water, light, and nutrients.

We can't do much about the water and light, but we can manage the nutrients to give the crop a competitive edge.

Weeds respond to nutrients like most crops — but they can also be more responsive and more adaptable. Weeds show similar growth patterns and have similar nutrient requirements as crops.

Perennials can easily get ahead of annual crops because they have an early and greedy appetite for nutrients because of their already well-developed root systems. Aggressive weeds, such as lambsquarter or wild oats, have a faster developing and more extensive root system than crops.

Many weeds have a special ability to utilize high nutrient levels by luxuriant growth; others show the ability to grow better on soils with low levels of nutrients.

As a generalization, weeds are better able to withstand adverse environmental conditions, including nutrient stress, than crops. Weeds have a competitive advantage under such conditions.

Fertilization can be used as a weed management tool, especially if it's adopted with an integrated pest management approach.

The key is to fertilize the crop and not the weed and placement is critical. Alberta researchers have shown that banding nitrogen can have dramatic effects on week populations and biomass production. In zero-till barley they found banding nitrogen, at increasing rates, decreased green foxtail populations by more than 95 percent and stinkweed populations by 80 percent.

In wheat, nitrogen increased both wheat seed yield and foxtail barley biomass. However, banding the nitrogen produced less foxtail barley and more wheat yield than broadcasting the nitrogen.

Fertilizer placement for weed suppression is just as critical for immobile nutrients such as phosphorus. Alberta studies have shown that phosphorus placement can have a pronounced effect on the competitive ability of wild oats in barley.

In one experiment, seed-placed phosphorus decreased wild oat production by more than 50 percent compared to broadcast phosphorus applications. When more available to the barley, phosphorus enhanced its growth, thus preventing wild oat seed production. However, when broadcast application increased phosphorus availability to the wild oats, their production increased at the expense of the barley.

Phosphorus helps roots and seedlings develop more rapidly, getting the crop off to a good start.

A fast start is essential to make the crop competitive, especially against aggressive weeds. Canadian researchers have reported that each day of emergence of wild oats before wheat or barley increased yield losses by about three percent. And, yield losses declined by the same amount for each day wild oats emerged after the crop. Any practice that will encourage the crop to emerge before weeds will likely increase yield.

Put your fertilizer where it will do the most good — next to the crop. Don't give weeds any extra help — they don't need it.

Soil 'Detective' Helps Farmers

GREENBELT, Md. — Smearing the soil in farm fields during planting can make it tough for young corn plant roots to push their way through the soil.

But a fiber optic sensor developed by scientists with USDA's Agricultural Research Service could warn growers that smearing is happening.

This would give the grower an opportunity to adjust equipment or change planting attachments.

The sensor was developed in studies led by Donald C. Erbach at ARS' National Soil Dynamic Laboratory, Auburn, Ala.

Soil smearing is just what the name implies. As planting equipment sows crop seeds, the machinery rubs against the soil. This rubbing may smear the soil, forming a smooth, compact layer in the seed furrow.

This slick layer of soil slows air and water flow through the soil and restricts shoot and root growth. More pressure from the planter can mean more smearing. Since there's no effective way to detect how much soil smearing the planter causes, it's difficult to estimate crop losses.

The fiberoptic sensor would serve as an alarm attached to the planter. The sensor projects a light beam onto the sidewall of the seed furrow and analyzes the reflected light for characteristics that indicates smearing. When the sensor detects soil smearing, it sends a signal to the grower.

ARS scientists are looking for partners to develop the fiberoptic sensor technology for the marketplace. Their work on the sensor at Auburn, Ala., and Ames, Iowa, is part of the merging high-tech field of precision agriculture — using new technology to help farmers conserve resources while improving their production efficiency.

NCGA Supports Pilot Program On Wetlands

NCGA sent a letter to Sens. Tom Daschle (D-S.D.) and Tim Johnson (D-S.D.) Sept. 22 supporting a pilot program for the Prairie Pothole region that would allow small farmed wetlands to be enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) under the continuous sign-up.

These small farmed wetlands are areas typically adjacent to buffer strips, but yet have not been eligible for the continuous sign-up. This pilot program would make a "technical fix" to allow the enrollment of this land.

This program would be in place over the next two years and work within the existing CRP cap of 36.4 million acres.

NCGA believes that it is important to give growers the flexibility to participate in government conservation programs and this legislation would provide a much-needed option for growers in the prairie pothole region.

NCGA Leaders Meet With Other Farm Group Heads

NCGA President Lynn Jensen and CEO Rick Tolman joined other farm group leaders in Washington Sept. 20 at an agricultural commodity roundtable meeting hosted by the American Farm Bureau Federation.

These periodic meetings are designed to give the heads of the nation's major agricultural organizations an opportunity to build relationships and share information on the major issues of the day.

Discussions at this week's meeting focused on international trade, agricultural research, environmental issues, and the 2002 Farm Bill.

Public Policy Team Takes Its Show To The Quad Cities

Members of NCGA's Public Policy Action Team discussed the future of farm policy with grower leaders from Iowa and Illinois Sept. 14. Their meeting in Moline, Ill., was the fourth in a series of state visits that the action team has made as part of NCGA's Farm Bill "discovery process."

As NCGA begins developing policy recommendations for the 2002 Farm Bill, the action team is visiting various states in order to gain better perspective on regional farm policy differences. More than 20 grower leaders and action team members participated in the session.

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Getty Petroleum Marketing, Inc. was recently honored by the nation's corn growers for using renewable, environmentally friendly ethanol in the gasoline it sells at about 1,300 stations in 12 Northeast and Mid-Atlantic states.

National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) President Lynn Jensen presented his organization's annual President's Award to Getty Chairman and CEO Leo Liebowitz during the Commodity Classic in Orlando.

"A satisfied customer is the best advertisement for ethanol. The fact that one of the nation's largest independent gasoline marketers is successfully blending it into all of their gasoline is a testament to ethanol's economic and environmental benefits," Jensen said.

Oxygenates such as ethanol or methyl tertiary butyl ether (MTBE) are blended with gasoline to help it burn more cleanly and reduce air pollution. Petroleum-based MTBE has been the oxygenate of choice outside the Corn Belt. But it has recently been found polluting water supplies from Maine to California, raising widespread concern about its environment and health effects.

"We're honoring Getty for proactively choosing the sensible alternative: clean-burning, corn-based ethanol," said Jensen. "This is certainly good for corn growers. But, more importantly, it's good for consumers and good for the environment."

Getty has promoted its switch from MTBE to ethanol by hanging banners at its stations, distributing informational brochures to consumers, placing full-page ads in major newspapers, and including information on its web site (www.getty.com). Through these efforts, the company educates millions of consumers a month about ethanol's benefits.

"Getty's success with ethanol-blended gasoline provides a shining example to other refiners and blenders. Ethanol can and should be the oxygenate of choice in clean-burning gasoline nationwide," Jensen said.

Corn Production in the U.S. – 1999

Despite challenging growing conditions in many parts of the United States, corn growers produced 9 437 billion bushels of corn from 77 4 million acres in 1999 A wet spring throughout the Corn Belt was followed by severe drought along the East Coast, many parts of the South and several Midwestern states. This was the fourth year that federal farm policy provided the flexibility to allow farmers to rotate crops for greater efficiency This is reflected in a very significant statistic – average corn acreage under "Freedom to Farm" increased 4 5 percent and corn production increased 15 5 percent compared with acreage and production numbers under previous farm programs

WORLD CORN PRODUCTION

Corn is grown in more countries than any other crop and is a major source of food for both humans and animals throughout the world. While the United States produces and exports more corn than any other country, U.S. corn growers must be vigilant in maintaining their competitive advantage. We must ensure the best possible corn yields and quality, fair and open trade policies and transportation infrastructure for timely movement to export markets.

CORN PRODUCTION IN THE U.S. – HISTORICAL

While the number of corn acres planted in the United States has remained fairly constant over the past several decades, higher yields per acre have increased total corn production. Hybrid corn production practices and improved corn genetics have been responsible for steady yield increases over the last 50 years. Biotechnology promises to increase exponentially both corn yields and intrinsic qualities as world population growth creates increased demand for corn and corn products.

U.S. CORN CROP VALUE

In 1999, 22 percent of all harvested crop acres were harvested as corn for grain USDA estimates that farmers will receive an average of only $1 90 per bushel, for a total crop value of $17.93 billion The low commodity prices are a direct result of abundant world grain supplies and a slow down in the global economy, which has slowed the growth in demand for food and feed. Global demand is beginning to recover, and liberalized trading rules will lead to greater prosperity But we have no assurance that demand for grain can keep pace with productivity in the near term

Corn is traditionally marketed as a commodity and priced accordingly Increasingly farmers – and their National Corn Growers Association – are looking to improve profits by producing value-enhanced grains for specific end uses Capturing that value for enhanced grower profitability is one of the most important issues facing the future of production agriculture and NCGA works tirelessly towards this effort

STRAIGHT TALK ON CORN SILAGE

Corn silage issues are complex. There is a tendency to grasp a 'that makes sense' explanation because the 'real deal' is often more complicated. Consider situation and speculation surrounding this corn silage issue, along with a brief description of where Pioneer research currently stands with facts and science.

Kernel Texture, Test Weight and Kernel Passage

Situation: Cows sometimes pass whole kernels from corn silage into the manure. It is frustrating to see valuable starch from corn kernels 'escape' digestion.

Speculation: Corn hybrids bred for higher grain test weight are more likely to result in silage corn kernels passing into the manure. Corn hybrids bred to have softer kernel texture provide more digestible starch.

Facts and Science: All seed companies determine test weight at grain maturity (black layer) Kernels with high test weight tend to have hard kernel texture at grain maturity. The hard starch that contributes most to high test weight and hard kernel texture is the last starch developed as the kernel matures. More research needs to be done to determine kernel texture differences at silage maturity. Pioneer is currently conducting research in this area. Hybrids with softer kernel texture have not shown higher starch availability. Soft kernel texture hybrids tend to have less starch as a percent of the plant and lower dry matter yield per acre. Soft textured corn hybrids have a higher risk of developing mold and mycotoxin problems.

NCGA Unveils IRM Website

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) introduced the final piece of its insect resistance management (IRM) education plan.

Growers throughout the country can now go on line at www.ncga-.com and check the IRM requirements on their farm.

Last April the NCGA, in conjunction with the technology companies, and in consultation with leading land grant universities developed an industry-wide plan for preventing corn borer resistance to the Bt technology. This plan was codified by the EPA in January.

"We developed this industry-wide approach to simplify the message to farmers on their refuge requirements," said Fred Yoder, Plain City, Ohio farmer and NCGA Corn Board member. "Since refuge requirements differ geographically, this Website will allow farmers to see exactly what they need to do by state and by county to be in compliance.

"Producers have demonstrated that they will exercise individual responsibility once they are informed. It's been true in areas such as soil, conservation, protecting water quality, and proper handling of chemicals. Preserving Bt technology is no different. It is individual action on individual farms that will protect this technology for everyone, and this Website will help inform growers" said Yoder.

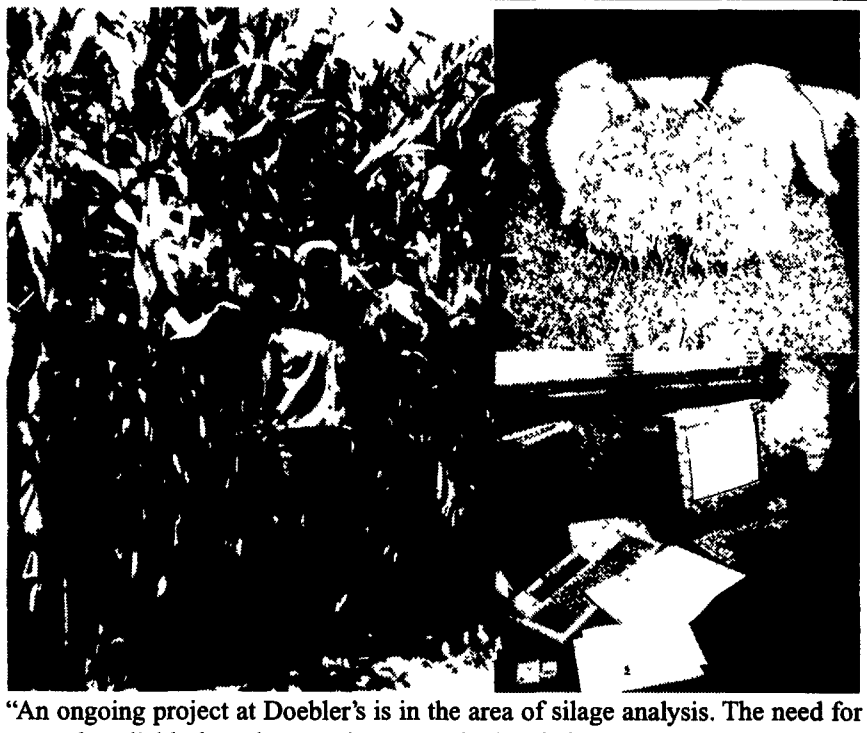
800.853.CORN "Your Regional Advantage"® www.doeblers.com



"An ongoing project at Doebler's is in the area of silage analysis. The need for not only reliable but also consistent results has led us to explore many techniques over the years. Doebler's currently has a patent pending on a very innovative and progressive process which allows us to very quickly and accurately measure the various components of a corn plant. Having this information is just one of the tools used in making recommendations based on hybrid performance." Jim Breining, Director of Research, Doebler's Hybrids, Inc.

A New "Silage Only"

What Else Is New for Year 2001

A range of "Silage Only" hybrids was introduced last year and became very popular. Doebler's is very excited about its newest "Silage Only" offering S407L. With a relative maturity of 98 days, it will fill the needs of the growers who may have felt left out last year because only an earlier or later corn was available. This new leafy (LFY) hybrid can expect to turn heads with its high quality of yield. Like others in its class, it will do best in a moderate population and in high fertility. "Silage only" grain harvest is NOT recommended.

Plus...

At 118 days RM, 82XPRR should prove to be the same high yielder as its relative 82XP with its solid kernels and excellent performance under stress. And the ability to apply Roundup® as a selective herbicide.

For those of you who were whelmed by the [illegible] of last year's [illegible] you'll [illegible] hear about [illegible] FieldGard® partner [illegible]XYG with [illegible] relative maturity of 114 days. This new FieldGard® variety has most of the characteristics of 747XY, its dark green robust leaves and sizeable ear. And now with the advantage of corn borer resistance. It produces high yields [illegible] or silage when used in moderate populations and high fertility.

635XRR at 108 days, a replacement for 634XRR, continues the tradition of 636XY. Stalks are similar but with slightly narrower leaves. The yield potential is outstanding.

You'd like a super yielder with Roundup Ready®? We have it for you as 596XRR at 107 days RM. Working well as a grain or silage corn, it is a hearty grower. Like its relative 596XY, it likes moderate populations and good fertility.

Remember last year's popular new hybrid 469XP? We are offering its new Roundup Ready® equivalent 469XRR at 97 days RM. It too is an excellent yielder with good late season appearance and rapid dry down.

It's that time again!
